

show how dependent human beings are on one another around the world for both peace and prosperity. This calls for an integrated agenda for peace and sustainable development.

The year 2000 has been designated the International Year of the Culture of Peace. This requires new political priorities for cooperation and sustainable development instead of armaments. The Group of 78 was founded on these values, but it must persist speaking forcefully to ensure that Canadian policies continue to reflect these principles.