SPEECH ON CANADA.

My Lords,

rs, be ament any of

eld tos their espects

tion of

ar, it is

o over-

urpose

tance:

o well

enemy

wever.

octrine

st mis-

e most

id may atever.

above

cesses.

made

v-Re-

onstitu-

othing

ning a

nvested

as en-

THE part which I had the honour to bear last summer in this House, when the Commons sent up those ill-fated resolutions to which I trace the whole of the present disasters, impels me to present myself thus early, and to obtrude upon your Lordships my sentiments regarding the important question before you. And, my Lords, I wish that, in following my Noble Friend over the ground which he has just trodden, I could confine myself to the space he has travelled over without trespassing upon other more delicate parts of it. But it never seems to have struck him that when a Minister of the Crown comes to Parliament with a proposition, not merely such as the address contains, but such as we are warned is to follow swiftly upon the address—a demand of extraordinary aid for the executive Government-measures of a high prerogative and unconstitutional kind—it never has struck him, that the Minister who resorts to Parliament for the help of its extreme powers, in applying remedies of the last description - has something more to do than merely to ask for those remedies and shew their necessity—that he has to explain