WM. S. HART

"The Primal Lure" is an absorbing drama of life in the great Canadian Northwest. It recites the stirring romance of Angus McConnell, a young Scotch-Canadian factor, and Lois Le Moyne, daughter of a French settler at the post. It is replete with thrilling encounters with the Blackfoot Indians and teems with a love interest rivaled in its appeal only by the picturesque beauty of the story's background. Hart has the role of McConnell, and he has invested it with rare power. Knife fight with Indian photographed under water, and wonderful snow storm scenes and glorious sunsets are features. A heart-probing story of surpassing interest.

GOLF IS PLAYED BY INSANE IN ILLINOIS

National Champion Tells of Benefits Derived From This Game

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Chas. "Chick" Evans, national open golf champion, writes: Many a time when playing at the Ridgemoor Country Club I have heard, when we caught a glimpse of the sad inmates of Dunning looking out on the links, would-be humorous remarks about the "nuts" over there. Some have even advocated the extension of the insane asylum fence to include the golf course, by which economical means "all nuts might be kept together." I have noticed that whenever a golf course is near an asylum for the insane the same jokes are made. It has remained, however, for the town of Elgin to turn the points of these jokes and to build a golf course at the State hospital for the use of insane patients. Only last week the opening of the source took place and the result justified Dr. Gohagan's wisdom in providing golf links for the insane under his care, for the making of this golf course is the materialization of his theory of care for sick minds. He says that it is absolutely necessary to get his patients to think about something besides themselves.

"Men and women who rave about the war, tear up their clothes and break the furniture in their rooms are the kind we want out on the links," says the kindly superintendent. The first trial of the links was more than successful, and although the State had furnished a large number of clubs, the supply is not equal to the demand. To the experienced golfer it seems a good idea to use the game of golf to sweep the cobwebs from disordered brains. In case of physical and mental sickness it is necessary to avoid brooding over pains and troubles, and I think that any one who has ever played golf will agree that one of its greatest virtues is that it demands concentration upon the game to the exclusion of any thought concerning other things. Exercise and deep breathing upon a golf course make most of us ready for peaceful slumber at night. What can be more ideal for disordered brains obsessed with maddening fancies than healthful, all-absorbing, troubled sleep when the day is ended. To play golf one must relax; the good golfer avoids nervous tension. I congratulate Dr. Gohagan on his

THE BIG LEAGUES

White Sox and Tigers Are On The Heels of the Champions

Race Is Interesting

Pirates and Giants Battle For Twelve Innings to a Tie; Brooklyn and Braves Fight For Lead

Well, at last the three teams picked by critics at the beginning of the season to fight it out for the championship of the league are up on top and present indications are that they will remain there. The Red Sox are leading the Tigers by five games and the White Sox by five and a half games. Chicago critics say that the White Sox, with their grand aggregation of ball players, including a wonderful array of pitching talent, are now showing their real worth, and while they have been a disappointment for a few years, are liable to come through. The Detroit Tigers are still able to slug out enough games to keep them up on top fighting for leading honors aided by Cobb's wonderful base running and batting. That game in Pittsburgh between the Pirates and Giants must have been worth seeing. The Giants had the better of the argument, but failed to get the necessary margin. The race between Brooklyn and the Braves is being watched with interest. On Saturday the latter gained, but they lost the advantage yesterday.
