THE THREE GROUPS.

There are three distinct groups in opposition to a civic distribution system in St. John, although they are all working to the same end. There is, first, the New Brunswick Power Company group, with its eye on that capitalization of $5,100,000, on which it wants a return. There is, second, a small group of citizens who have been misled by the false cry of increased taxation and the alleged danger of a second distribution system. There is, third, a small but noisy group who would rather see St. John remain in the clutches of the Power Company than that those who have fought against them for hydro should succeed. Of the three groups the New Brunswick Power Company group is doing just what everybody would naturally expect. With the second group one may at least sympathize to some extent because of the nature of the campaign carried on by the enemies of hydro; but the third group is worthy of severe condemnation. It is narrow, and without civic spirit. An analysis of the situation, however, shows that they were last November, except that they are growing restive and uneasy because of delays in carrying out the policy which they have three times endorsed. It is not surprising that they ask with increasing emphasis of what use it is to go to the polls and vote if for that which they vote is to be denied them, or their authority questioned in any quarter. That community is most progressive which, when a large majority has decided upon a course of action, sinks its differences and sets out to make a success of the venture. St. John ought to be in that class.

PROFITEERS HARD HIT.

An illustration of tardy justice in the United States is found in the case of fourteen men jailed in Boston last week for an offence of which they were convicted four years ago. They found guilty of conspiracy to fix the price of fish in war-time. They were able to defeat the ends of justice by further action in the case until last week. Perhaps they are men of less prominence they would not have evaded the penalty so long. The leader among them, and the organizer of what was termed The Bay State Fishing Company, was Frederick Monroe Dyer, president of F. M. Dyer & Co., investment securities, New York, and formerly president also of the Alston Street and Sew Company of New York. He and four of the biggest fish dealers, who were officers of the "fish trust," were sentenced last week to ten months and hard labor, and a fine of $1,000 each. Nine other dealers were sent up for five months and fined $500 each. Another was not sentenced because of ill health, and still another had abandoned the legal fight and went to Deer Island in February, where he has now been joined by the other fourteen. Their crime merited more speedy punishment, but it is at least satisfactory that in the end the law is vindicated.

There is much interest now in the probable effect of the unparalleled winter upon crop prospects for this year. A summary of the condition of fall wheat throughout Ontario shows that except in Elgin county it is in excellent condition, having been well protected by the snow. The president of the Niagara Fruit Growers, Limited, says present indications point to a normal fruit crop this year. In the Prairie Provinces conditions are reported to be favorable for wheat. In New Brunswick a winter of heavy snow is usually followed by good crop conditions.

The citizens are again exhorted to be reasonable, to be ready to co-operate, to get together with the Power Company, to forget prejudice, to live and let live, and so on. To what end are these exhortations given? To the end that the New Brunswick Power Company may be able to gobble up the Mingushewog. That is the object of the whole "get together" campaign.

Naturally the Federal Light and Traction Company of New York wants hydro. It has already bought the water in the New Brunswick Power Company's stock.

There are some people who would like another plebiscite on hydro, not because they think for a moment that the people have changed their minds, but because it would result in a delay, and delay is in the interests of the New Brunswick Power Company.

AN UNEXPECTED RESULT.

When the Fordney-McCumber tariff was enacted in the United States its authors anticipated less foreign competition in manufactured goods. They did expect an increased revenue from the higher rates, but with it they anticipated the protection of American industries. This has not been the result. The revenue, it is true, is much larger, but so also are the imports of merchandise. The New York Tribune says:—

"In the first nine months of the present fiscal year tariff duties brought in $400,000,000. For the full year the receipts from this source will exceed $600,000,000, outturning the Treasury's estimates by $100,000,000 or more.

"Imports, dutiable and non-dutiable, are running well ahead of the totals under the emergency tariff. The Department of Commerce has just issued import figures for December last and for the twelve months ended last December. They show that in December the value of merchandise imported was $86,000,000 greater than it was in December, 1921. For the calendar year the gain was $600,000,000, and the gain for the fiscal year ending June 30 next will be still heavier, as mounting tariff receipts indicate. We have been told that Europe cannot send us goods under the new high rates. Yet the December figures show that Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Greece, Holland, Norway, Sweden and Great Britain all increased their shipments here, and only Switzerland and Spain decreased theirs. Great Britain's total rose $40,000,000 and Italy's $3,557,000. Great Britain's exports to us were $116,000,000 greater in 1922 than in 1921, and Germany's were $97,000,000 greater."

The discovery of these facts leads the Tribune, which had advocated postponing permanent tariff revision till things had settled down, to remark:—

"Mr. Fordney and Mr. McCumber cannot be pleased with the discovery that their handwork has increased imports. But economic conditions are so complicated today that the old tariff is bound to be inflexible. The tariff is no longer a simple problem worked out by rule of thumb. It is more than ever a matter for scientific, economic and practical business solution."

SAINTS, ANCIENT AND MODERN

The beautiful story of the life of St. Francis of Assisi, was graphically and vividly told by Rev. A. L. Fleming, in St. John's (Stone) church last night and a large congregation was present to hear Mr. Fleming's address. The sermon was the first of a series of five to be given at the evening services and social banquets of the great saints, ancient and modern, in whose lives is revealed the resurrection power of Christ. The other saints whose life stories are to be related in turn are St. Columba, General Charles Gordon of Khartoum and Saint Sander Singh of India. The life of St. Francis, Mr. Fleming will speak of in two sermons, the first dealing with his life and Ireland and the second with the saint in Scotland. At the close of the service an organ recital was given and the congregation was delighted with the splendid musical numbers played by the organist, J. F. Browne.

The Marriage Game

The Snappiest of Pastimes As Played to a Decision Every Day

By Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hatton

MORE ABOUT THE S. OF H.

Her Play—We were speaking only yesterday about the masculine sense of humor. I confess no woman will ever understand it, my love. Why, for example, does a man think that the vow he pledges when he marries—to "cherish and love beyond all others," and so forth—is that humorous? Yet no man ever speaks of the marriage vow he pledges without laughing in a half-apologetic manner as if he were discussing a joke that was in perhaps bad taste. I cannot understand it. No man ever suggests that the vow his wife has pledged to love and obey is comical. I dare say that if I were to apologize for that and laugh it off casually you would clasp me on your hat and go out, not forgetting to slam the front door as hard as you could behind you. What is it that is so humorous about a wedding? What is so funny about a birth? Yet all men, whose sense of humor you have spoken of at least ten thousand times, consider that a marriage ceremony is the very height of comicality, and that when a man announces that he has become a father you thump him on the back, shout loudly and behave as if he was ennobled by the king of the Canibals. Births are so terribly marriage and births are so terribly marriage and births are so terribly marriage, it is a mystery to me why death is not considered too funny for words by you super-humans. Whenever you meet some chap having been fired from his job, you laugh. Why? Is that so funny? And when you speak of a man falling in business, you shrug and grin. Is that another good joke? You men and your sense of humor! See here, stop nagging me!

The Referee—Does she win? Ah, easily.

TO THE LEADER OF THE MIGRATING WILD-GEES

(By Agnes Joynes.)

Strange guide of that strange V-shaped caravan
A-pointing north; of winged travelers
Against a cold gray sky; who carry your
Most prized possession—wild, sweet life—unto Another chime! We envy you your matchless
Leadership—Your compass now!
We only know there is no compass
made
By man that's half so true! Your course is sure.
Your only fear lest the marauder,
Man,
O'ertake your caravan upon the way
And rob you of your priceless jewel—life.
That, indeed, wild call came wafted
on the winds;
You took the sporting chance—I cast
aside
The cold, hard fact that life must ever be
Sustained by sacrifice of life, and wish
You safe arrival at your journey's end!

IN LIGHTER VEIN.

Precisely.

Paul Conner—Now, sir, supposing I made a remark at your assembly, would you knock you down. How would you describe my action?

Burly Wilton—Well, I should say you were bawling—Punch (London).

Words Unnecessary.

"Is the boss in?" asked the visitor.

"The office boy, with his chair tilted back and his legs stretched out on a bench, made no reply.

"I asked if the boss was in," said the visitor.

"The office boy glanced at him, but remained silent. "Didn't you hear me?" snapped the visitor.

"Of course, I heard you," answered the boy, scornfully.

"Then why the dickens didn't you tell me if the boss is in?"

"Now, I ask you," retorted the boss, as he reentered his legs on the desk, "does it look like it?"—Los Angeles Times.

Silly and Stupid.

Some years ago Mr. Balfour explained a bound-up ankle by saying: "I was crossing my brother's grounds when, coming to a gate, I had to climb over it, by which I came to know the way to the first bar and gate."

"You may thank your lucky stars," said his friend, "that your brother's gate was not as lofty as your style, or you must have broken your neck!"—Boston Transcript.

Improving The System.

Pat was telling Mike how he picked winners at the races. "Ye see, I held up a list of the horses and got the wife to shut her eyes and jab a hatpin into the list, and, begorra, the one the hatpin goes through wins every time."

"It's a great scheme ye have, Pat," said Mike, "and, faith, I'll try the same myself. But not with a hatpin; it's a fork I'll use, and so I'll get three winners—first, second and third!"—Boston Transcript.

POCKETS FULL OF ALMOST WORTHLESS PAPER MONEY

Ottawa, April 9.—Impressions of the various countries of Europe received during her trip recently by Lady Foster at a meeting of the Ottawa Women's Club the other day.

Industrial conditions in Germany, a great deal since the war, she said, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Bohemia of Germany, has progressed so that at the present time it has a budget with a surplus, and has made advances along other constitutional and educational lines. Lady Foster told of the miseries of Austria, where she said five dollars was worth five dollars, to a country where one pound equaled 84,000 kronen. Tourists and profiteers were seen with pockets bulging with this almost worthless paper money.
