

RESTORE DYING FAITH OF LABOR, CAPITAL IS TOLD

Convince Workers They are Being Treated Honestly, Unrest Will End, Westinghouse President Says.

(New York Tribune.)

Capital must prove its "reason for being" to restore labor's dying faith in the present industrial order, E. M. Herr, president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, declared last night at the joint forum of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the American Economic Association at the Engineering Societies' Building.

This faith, Mr. Herr said, can be restored only when capital or management convinces the workers that they are being treated honestly and without "chicanery" and by the substitution of the "rule of reason and intelligence for force, and so endeavor to restore in America the freedom of the individual, be he employer or employee."

Mr. Herr asserted "there is more liberty and consideration for the workers than ever before," but that nevertheless an underlying labor unrest and distrust, born of "fear and misunderstanding—fear of coercion, unemployment, sickness—and a lack of mutual confidence as between employer and employee," exists and that it "is the duty and responsibility of the management to prove its reason for being, and that the collective result of the combined efforts of management and workers is a fine and great thing."

"If they can feel that this is the case," added Mr. Herr, "most men will cheerfully be subservient."

Discussing the wage question, Mr. Herr said that while manufacturers wish to see their employees receive a wage "with reasonable working hours, will toil cheerfully in their comfort," this is only possible "when economic conditions will permit, as wages are not and cannot be based on the cost of living," adding that the "employee must live in accordance with his income and responsibilities and exercise frugality and care in his expenditures."

Mr. Herr urged the spread of the shop representation plan. He said this method "along simple, plain lines that can be lived up to" has succeeded. He pointed to the fact that more than 800,000 employees are now working under this plan.
