

POETRY
THE GRAVES OF A HOUSE-HOLD.
[By Felicia Hemans]

They grew in beauty, side by side,
They fill'd one house with glee—
Their graves are sever'd far and wide,
By mount, and stream, and sea!

The same fond mother bent at night
O'er each far sleeping brow,
She had each folded flower in sight—
Where are those daisies now?

One midst the forests of the west
By a dark stream is laid;
The Indian knows his place of rest,
Far in the cedar shade.

The sea, the blue long sea, hath one;
He lies where pearls lie deep;
He was the loved of all, yet none
O'er his low bed may weep.

One sleeps where southern vines are dress'd
Above the noble slane?
He wraped his colours round his breast,
On the bloody-red field of Spain;

And one o'er her the mrtle showers
Its leaves, by soft winds fann'd;
She faded 'midst Italian flowers,
The last of that bright band.

And parted thus, they rest who pray'd Beneath they same green tree,
Whose voices mingled as they pray'd Around one parent knee!

They that with smiles lit up the hail,
And cheer'd with song the hearth—Alas for love, thou wert all,
And nought beyond, on earth;

THE WIND.

The wind is a language I would I could learn:
Sometimes 'tis soothing and sometimes
'tis stern;

Sometimes it comes like a low sweet song,
And all things grow calm as the wind floats along;

And the forest is lull'd by the dreamy strain,
And slumber sinks down on the wandering main;

And its crystal arms are folded in rest,
And the tall ship sleeps on its heaving breast.

Sometimes when Autumn grows yellow and sear,
And the sad clouds weep for the dying year.

It comes like a wizard and mutters its spell;
I would that its magical tones I could tell!

And it beckons the leaves with its view-
less hand,
And they leap from the branches at its command,

And follow its footsteps with wheeling feet,
Like fairies that dance in the moonlight sweet.

Sometimes it comes in the wintry night;
And I here the flap of its pinions of might;

And I see the flash of its withering eye,
As it looks from the thunder clouds rolling on high,

And pauses to gather its fearful breath,
And lifts up its eye like the angel of death;

And the billows leap up when the summons they hear,
And the ship flies away as if winged with fear.

And the uncouth creatures that roam through the deep Start up at the sound from their floating sleep,

And career through the waters, like clouds
thro' the night,
To share in the tumult, their joy and
delight;

And when the moon rises the ship is no more;

Its joys and its sorrows are vanish'd and o'er;
And the fierce storm that slew it has faded away,

Like the dark dream that flies at the light of day.

AMERICAN SERVANTS.—A young man from Vermont was hired by a family, who were in extreme want of a footman.— He was a most friendly personage, as willing as he was free and easy; but he knew nothing of life out of a small farm house. An evening or two after his ar-ival, there was a large party at the house.
His mistress strove to impress upon him that all he had to do at tea time was to follow, with the sugar and cream, the waiter who carried the tea—to see that every one had cream and sugar, and to hold his tongue. He did his part with earnest face, stepping industriously from guest to guest. When he made the circuit and reached the door a doubt struck him, whether a group in the farthest part of the room had had the benefit of his attentions. He raised himself on his toes, with, "I'll ask," and shouted over the heads of the company,

"I say, how are yea off for sweetnin' in that ere corner?"
