

ECHOES

FROM

ERIEAU

Master James Boyd has been appointed as agent of The Planet at Erieau. Subscribers of this paper who fail to receive it regularly at their cottages will please report the matter to him and he will receive and forward any orders from those who desire The Planet sent to their cottages.

Miss Jessie Harper spent the day in Chatham.

Mrs. Gould and Miss Eide are guests at Shagunpee.

Mrs. Alister McKay returned to the city last evening.

Adjutant Collett was an Erieau visitor last evening.

The wind storm delapidated the awning at Sandy Knowe.

Miss Teakley arrived yesterday on a short visit to Glendale.

Dr. Hall and Miss Edythe Hall returned to the city this morning.

Thomas McCormick and family are occupying their summer residence.

Mrs. Tackaberry has returned to Chatham after a short holiday spent here.

Ed. Myers, Mrs. Warren Myers and family are among the latest Erieau visitors.

Mrs. Stripp arrived yesterday at Minnowanka, where she is the guest of friends.

The fine new steel row boat, purchased by S. M. Glenn, has arrived at the Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Stone and family are visiting at Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Glenn's.

Mrs. (Dr.) Harry Martin and Miss Dorothy Sheldon are summering here for a few days.

Mr. Gugenheimer returned to Cleveland to-day after a pleasant outing at Erieau.

Miss Cora Putnam has returned home to Blenheim after a pleasant visit at Drumtock Lodge.

Mrs. W. A. Chapman, of Toronto, and Miss Jennie Longwell, of Chatham, were visitors at Sandy Knowe yesterday.

The family of W. C. McArthur, who have been domiciled at Happy Days for the past two weeks, have returned to Chatham.

James Oldershaw and Rev. J. W. Webb are visiting at Mashroom. They were among the successful fishermen yesterday.

Thomas Mainville and family moved out to Erieau yesterday. They are occupying Mr. Mainville's cottage on Ice House avenue.

Miss Nell Young, of Portage La Prairie, Man., and Miss Nell Young, of Chatham, have returned to Sandy Knowe after a visit to the city.

The rain rather put a damper on the band concert last evening, but the band played despite the wet and the young people danced regardless of the raging elements.

Capt. James McLaren missed his train last evening and consequently spent the night at Erieau. Mr. McLaren slept so well at the Bungalow that he never heard the storm at all.

The oldest looking boat at Erieau belongs to J. T. Baikie. Chris Smith was remarking that he had no row-boat when Mr. Baikie suddenly remembered that he had a boat hidden away at Chatham's popular resort.

Then Chris Smith, armed with Mr. Baikie's chart, which showed where the concealed treasure was located, went to Erieau and located the boat beneath the residence of E. R. Smith.

The boat proved to be of ancient pattern and is supposed to belong to the Noah's Ark age. It is believed to have been a duck boat, but archaeologists are not sure about this.

Time has warped the boat and its original shape cannot be determined. Mr. Smith is quite proud of his relic, and it is the wonder and sport of all the residents of Centreville.

THE STORM.

And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon the houses, and great was the devastation in many of them for they were built upon the sands.

Whether Rev. Mr. Timmie will utilize some such theme for the subject of his address at the pavilion to-morrow evening is, of course, his own secret. But, if he does, the chances are that his words will possess the added force and fervor of profound personal experience—and many of his congregation will consider themselves qualified to murmur a pathetic "Amen."

The rain, the floods and the winds struck the homes of Erieau in hearty, happy and vigorous co-operation last night and there were strenuous times for the many who had houses "built upon the sands."

Nearly every cottage this morning flew its "regret to report" and elaborate casualty list—only some more so than others. Awnings were nearly torn in shreds, tents wafted hither and thither and huge waves played havoc with woodsheds and outhouses. The waters in both Lake and Eau rose several feet and boiled in frothy foam.

All an early hour distressed residents made their appearance in more or less primitive attire. Some, still in the disfigure of evening, struggled with various receptacles to bail out the water; others waded hither and thither collecting floating utensils. Ed. B. Northwood lost a valuable coup of Plymouth Rock hens, which was swept from the shore and the birds drowned.

W. H. Harper's yacht "Velma" and William Boyd's yacht "Shamrock III,"—as called, the owner declares, by reason of its speed—both dragged ashore. The "Velma" drifted over to the beach and the passengers on the morning train saw the steaming little craft bobbing serenely in the surf.

A Bad Stomach

Lessens the usefulness and mars the happiness of life.

It's a weak stomach, a stomach that can not properly perform its functions. Among its symptoms are distress after eating, nausea between meals, heartburn, belching, vomiting, flatulence and nervous headache.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures a bad stomach, indigestion and dyspepsia, and the cure is permanent. Accept no substitutes.

a short distance off the mouth of the creek. Capt. Norman Harper remained out this morning to go after the Velma. Shamrock III. was not where to be seen. Mr. Boyd went back on the 10:45 train to search for his Lygon challenger.

The Bonnie Belle and Louise rode safely at anchor and were at their moorings this morning.

But the situation was not without its humorous side—and the inimitable Walter Scane had located all the fun going.

"Notice Jim Glenn over there," said Walt. "No, he's not sick—just tired out, poor fellow. Hung on to the life-line this morning for four hilarious hours—according to his own count. Furnished one of the most thrilling presentations ever staged impromptu."

"Jim was a big business. The fact that his out-house was majestically riding the waves like an ocean liner added zest to his early rising proclivities and he got busy instantly. Jim got hold of one end of a clothes line, the other being permanently attached to the floating palace. There was the liveliest tug-of-war I ever witnessed, only Jim appeared a bit handicapped and blew off steam at almost too frequent intervals. Say, the way that raft towed him out was simply immense. But Jim was dressed for the occasion and his bedroom regular added a picturesque touch to the spectacular finale. Two hundred yards from his home the clothes line broke and the onlooking multitudes shrieked with horror when Jim went under. He reached shore blown and exhausted, and, when last seen, his limbs were still striding majestically over the lake."

"Sam Glenn was a bit more shrewd," continued Walt. "He anchored his woodshed with a great hawser and tied it twenty-seven times around a large telegraph pole. It floated at anchor throughout."

Everybody is busy to-day making repairs and by night it is expected all will be spic and span again. Happenings like last night's only add zest to the life of the experienced camper.

What the Dickens! The London Chronicle declares that "What the Dickens!" has nothing to do with the novelist. It is as old as Shakespeare, who in the "Merry Wives of Windsor" makes Mrs. Page say to Ford, "I cannot tell what the Dickens his name is." And so the word—a palpable diminutive of Dick, like Wilkins and Hodgkins and Watkins—came into use as a substitute for another and more important D. As to "play the Dickens," one thinks of Smollett and Humphry Clinker and the immortal scene in which the lion "would roar and tear and play the Dickens," and in comparatively late times Thomas Moore could write:

Like the Goths who played the Dickens With Rome and all her sacred chickens.

A French Dog Story. A Parisian lady went out recently for a walk in the Avenue de Clichy, talking with her a toy terrier, which she held by a string. While she was looking into a shop window two mischievous boys substituted a bone for the dog. A Great Dane then appeared on the scene, and, seeing the bone, made a dash and swallowed it, string included. The lady turned round and in despair cried out that the Great Dane had eaten her pet. The little dog was found later on, much to the joy of his mistress, who carried him off in a cab.

Remember's Feed of Oysters. Blamark on one occasion told Sidney Whitman of his well known feat in oyster eating. He was once in Liege, where he ordered some oysters in a restaurant—fifty to begin with. He saw the lady behind the counter look up in surprise; so when he had eaten them, wishing to see what effect it might have on her, he ordered another fifty, and so on until he had eaten 170 oysters. Mr. Whitman adds that "it is only fair to remember that in all probability they were the small Ostend variety."

The Tale of a Tail.

A writer in tracing the ancestry of the dog to wolf and jackal notices typical differences in the case of their eyes, their body colors and markings, the habit of turning around before lying down and other interesting peculiarities, but he does not mention the most striking and infallible way of distinguishing them—namely, by the fashion in which they carry their tails.

Wolves and coyotes have a sneaking way of carrying their tails low, almost dragging on the ground, while dogs carry their tails up, and the farther removed they are from the ferret type the higher they carry them. Shepherds and collies, which retain many of their racial characteristics, carry their tails lowest of all; setters and pointers a degree or two higher, stiffening out straight when drawing on game; terriers and hounds elevate their tails to the spinal line; St. Bernards and Newfoundlanders affect a curve over the back, while pugs actually come to a full twist. An old plainsman could tell a wolf or coyote as far as he could see him, and in buffalo days this was a most useful indication of buffalo herds being not far away. These predatory creatures always followed a moving herd—Forest and Stream.

Crabs and Earthquakes.

For some time previous to the day upon which the great Chilean earthquake of August, 1877, occurred great swarms of crabs of an unknown variety were seen in the bay of Paita. They all appeared to be greatly excited and were literally climbing over each other in their efforts to escape the impending calamity.

How they knew that the earthquake was collecting its strength to desolate the coast is more than man can say, but that they knew something unusual was about to happen there is no doubt whatever.

That there were millions of them may be inferred from the report of Dr. Forbes, who says that "ten days after the earthquake the dead crabs were thrown upon the beach in a wall-like line three or four feet wide along the whole extent of the bay."

STRICTLY THE NORTHWAY CO., Limited.

QUAKERS IN CANADA.

Brief Sketch of the Society and of the Children of Peace.

Two hundred and seventy-five years ago George Fox began to preach to the English of Charles I., gambling, where "Thou" and "You" were met out to the farmer and the mechanic, and "Mr." and "You" to none lower than a merchant. Emotionally Fox was a Bunyan. His very life reads like a mixture of John Wesley and Luther. Of martyrdoms, his life was a series of martyrdoms. He was in foul dungeons for months—often, for preaching that a man's religion is an inward experience and not a painted show. His doctrines were incorporated in a discipline drawn up this year for the Canadian society in their recent annual convention in Toronto.

Quakerism in Toronto dates back to 1877, when the first meeting of friends was held on Berkeley street. This grew out of a Bible class, and was founded by Mr. Elias Rogers, who still remains an active member of the society on Carlton street.

The second church was on Pembroke street. That being too remote for convenience the society moved in 1902 to the present new edifice on Carlton street, which is the only Quaker church in Toronto; not a remarkable fact when it is considered that the total Canadian membership is but 2,000.

Quakerism in the vicinity of Toronto dates back to 1800, when Timothy Rogers received from Gov. Simcoe a grant of 8,000 acres of land upon "Yonge" street in the solid bush on condition of settling forty families in that part. In 1809 he brought forty families from New England, all Friends. The following year came twenty families from Pennsylvania. Friends also. Thus began the colony of Quakers which for thirty-five years knew no adversity but the wilderness.

David Wilson organized a cult among the Sharon Society, known as the Children of Peace. On behalf of this offshoot, with its somewhat new-fangled and variant doctrines concerning government, etc., Wilson built a temple: a 19th century reproduction in pine of Solomon's temple. In this temple twice a year was held a great feast. Near the temple was a brass band for help in the musical service. And between the temple and the meeting-house he built, a curious study for himself, with many windows, from which he could see all the works his hand had made. He called it "The All-Seeing Eye." But the movement went the way of all fads. It died, and the primitive Fox religion again held the field.

So also it does to this day; as simple and severe, if not quite so unpopular as it was in the day when plain George Fox respectfully called the great Cromwell "Thee," spent twelve months in the Derby jail, six of them in a filthy dungeon, because he would not become a soldier, and left the name of "Quaker," as a sobriquet for his sect, because he told the Derby magistrates to tremble at the word of the Lord—and they did. A humble, democratic sect, they still eschew finery. They pay no stated salary, but a spontaneous giving to the minister, who does not claim to be called "Reverend," and is not regarded as a better man than the humblest of his flock, but merely as one having spiritual gifts. Every man may, if he choose, take part in any service. If not quite of the Spirit. Formalism in service, they have none; not even a prescribed order. They freely admit women to the work of the church, both private and public. In the courts of justice they will not swear, but simply make affirmation. They believe not in war but a kingdom founded on peace. Neither will they speculate in stocks or attend balls. They also give freely, and without advertisement of their estate, to the poor.

All reading notices of local announcements must be received at this office not later than noon of the day on which it is desired that they appear in The Planet.

A Wonderful Beautifier.

Happiness is indeed a wonderful beautifier. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, speaking about a woman's greatest charm, says: "A woman who does not carry about with her wherever she goes a halo of good feeling and a desire to make everybody contented, an atmosphere of grace, mercy and peace of at least six feet radius which wraps every human being upon whom she voluntarily bestows her presence and so flatters him with the comfortable thought that she is rather glad he is alive than otherwise, isn't worth the trouble of talking to as a woman. She may be well enough to hold discussions with." The woman who shows a gentle courtesy to all humanity, who is considerate and kind and, best of all, charitable, creates an atmosphere of happiness wherever she goes, and she attracts to her the best minds and the rarest natures.
