"The Six-hour Day"

By Lord Leverhulme. With an Introduction by Viscount Haldane. 331 pages. Price, $4.00.

Apart from the question of the Six-hour Day, in which Lord Leverhulme has written a special essay, the subjects dealt with include Co-partnership, Social Welfare, Housing, Education, Business Management and industrial efficiency. There's an engaging man-to-man frankness about Lord Leverhulme's style that makes his book unusually readable, while his constructive and straightforward views are likely to make a wide appeal, coming as they do from one of the most enlightened capitalists and foremost business administrators of the day.

"A Sound, Substantial Institution"

IN these critical times when every last one of us is so uncertain about who is marked as a victim of the Influenza epidemic, we should be particular about placing our Life Insurance only in sound; safe Companies, under whose protecting wing our accumulations will be available in the day of sorrow, business reverses, disability or old age.

The quotation used for our head-line from the "Canadian Insurance" of Feb. 11th, in commenting upon the last annual statement of "THE CONTINENTAL LIFE," applied to this well-known Insurance Company, is borne out by our record figures for 1919, showing the largest increases in every department for any year of the Company's history. Compared with 1918, New Business showed an increase of considerably over One Million dollars, while for "Total Income" and "Insurance in Force" the increases made were greater than those for any two previous years. Our gain in Amount of Insurance in Force, which is now over Fifteen Millions, was about Two-and-a-quarter Millions. Total Assets and Reserves also showed a corresponding growth, while death claims amounted to little more than 50 per cent. of the total for 1918. For further proof of its soundness and safety, send for booklet "OUR BEST ADVERTISERS"—then without delay

THE CLERICAL LIBRARY

Edited by Sir W. Robertson Nicoll, M.A., D.D.

This "Complete Encyclopaedia of Pulpit Literature" is one of the most practical and every-day usable sets of ministerial helps ever published. The editor's name is a guarantee of its quality and value. There is no greater figure in the religious world to-day than Sir W. Robertson Nicoll, M.A., LL.D., Editor of the "British Weekly." To the preparation of THE CLERICAL LIBRARY he has brought all the richness of his literary and biographical resources. The result is that all the varied requirements of pulpit and pastoral work are completely covered to the great help, joy and satisfaction of the anxious pastor who is looking for assistance in the solution of some vexing church problem or a suggestion for a sermon subject or an apt illustration.
