One year ago this week the paper on which The Guide is printed was changed from "newsprint" quality to what the trade calls "half-tone news." The paper situation is improving again, and before long The Guide hopes to be able to return finally to the "book" paper, which will facilitate a much more attractive reproduction of pictures and a more artistic arrangement of type.

In this issue of The Guide, the first of three political articles appears from the pen of our special correspondent at Ottawa. It deals with the conduct of the Unionist side of the House during the past session of parliament. Next week, a sympathetic account of the part played by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers, in opposition, will be given. Then, in the week following, a third article will give a resume of the various acts passed during the Union government's first term in parliament.

The Guide's book department has been receiving many inquiries about the handbook, Western Canada Law. The first edition of this little volume proved so popular that it ran out in a few months; and our order for the second edition has not yet been filled. It is expected that the second edition will be ready for sale by October 1.

Do you keep a file or a scrapbook as a ready source of information on subjects of current importance? It is a good habit, which every citizen taking an intelligent interest in his country's affairs, should adopt. If you happen to read an informative article in The Guide, or the newspaper, clip it, and file it away for future reference.

The membership campaigns which are now in progress in all three prairie provinces under the auspices of The Grain Growers' Association, have enlisted the active support of The Guide's staff in attending meetings and participating in their programs. Miss Mary P. McCallum, of our staff, left this week for Katchewan and Alberta, to attend or a month's trip through Manitoba, Saskatchewan meetings and participating in their programs. Miss Mary P. McCallum, of our staff, left this week for Katchewan and Alberta, to attend or a month's trip through Manitoba, Saskatchewan meetings and participating in their programs. Miss Mary P. McCallum is in thorough touch with conditions throughout the western country, and ought to give valuable assistance to the districts she visits.

The Canada Registration Board has issued regulations for the registration of all persons over 16 years of age residing in the country. The date of registration, which already has been announced through the columns of the daily press, as June 22, will be made known officially by proclamation. The location of the places of registration in each division of the different electoral districts will also be publicly announced in due time. The idea of this registration plan, is to get a comprehensive inventory of the nation's man and woman power with a view to carrying on the industries of the country as efficiently as possible in the face of military drafts.
