Still More Evidence
In Connection With Brutal Murder in Russia.

[Canadian Press Dispatch]
KIEV, Russia, Oct. 22.—Further evidence implicating Vera Tcheberiak and her companions in the murder of Andrew Yushinsky, the Christian boy in March 1910, was given to-day by Krassovsky, the former chief of police who took the witness stand when the trial of Mendel Beiliss was resumed.

Krassovsky said that, in the course of his investigation of the murder, he had not found anything to show Beiliss' connection with the crime and his original suspicions of the Fedichkos had been soon allayed while he had speedily concluded that the theory of a ritual murder was unfounded.

In his testimony Krassovsky recounted a story told him by Svalchko a fellow prisoner of Rudinsky, one of Vera Tcheberiak's associates. One night in jail Svalchko overheard a prisoner say to Rudinsky: "Why did you decorate him like that?" Rudinsky replied: "To prevent him from becoming a traitor, the dog."

Rudinsky also told his jail companion a man he and others had drawn up for placing him in the Cathedral of St. Sophia, the most interesting religious church in Kiev. He said the door of the cathedral could not be forced and it was therefore decided to pass young Yushinsky through a grating for the purpose of drawing the bolts.

Under the guise of a Moscow reporter Krassovsky made the acquaintance of Catherine Diakonoff, a friend of Vera Tcheberiak and from her learned that the Tcheberiak flat was a den of thieves and during the outrages against the Jews in 1905 served as a depository for pillaged goods.

Catherine Diakonoff related to Krassovsky a story of visits paid by her to Vera Tcheberiak's flat about the time of the murder of Yushinsky. She said Vera Tcheberiak had displayed much agitation. Three mysterious young men were there when Catherine Diakonoff arrived and they scurried out of the room as she entered. She said she saw in the corner of one of the rooms a large bundle and she asked what it contained. Vera Tcheberiak replied: "All sorts of stuff." When Vera Tcheberiak heard Catherine Diakonoff had been summoned by the police to give evidence she was alarmed and begged her visitor to say nothing about the three men, adding that she would not be taken alive.
