Claremont Summers

BY
 Mrs. Emerson Marcy
 Kilbride, Ontario

Mrs. Markland was attending to her household duties as usual when the door bell rang and Miss Richmond was announced. Mrs. Markland took Velma in where Claremont was sleeping. Velma uttered an exclamation of surprise, to which she added, "Why, Mrs. Markland, I had no idea Mr. Summers was so badly hurt. Oh, he will certainly have to be removed from this place of incompetent nursing."

At this outburst of language, Gladys could not endure, and she said to Velma, "Very well, we shall hire a trained nurse and Mr. Summers will stay here. The doctor says he can't be moved yet."

"Yes," added Mrs. Markland. "Well, dear Miss Markland, if you need any assistance, why just call on me."

Velma could speak very condescendingly now. What would be the end of this anyway?

"I wish I had gone with him this afternoon. I must think of some plan, so he won't be nursed by that girl," Velma thought to herself.

Mrs. Summers tried to send nurses and maids, but Mrs. Markland said no.

A week after the accident Claremont was sitting up in bed, or rather propped up.

Gladys had been talking to him very unsatisfactorily.

He asked, "Who nursed me through all this illness?"

"We all did," answered Gladys.

"How long have I been here?"

"A week, Mr. Summers."

"Call me Claremont after this, Miss Markland."

"Call me Gladys after this, Claremont."

Just then the doctor came in and a talk with him. "You can get out of here now as soon as you feel strong enough."

"Say, doctor, who nursed me?"

"Why, the tall, dark young lady, of course, who did you think?"

"It seems strange mother never sent down any trained nurses."

Just then Mrs. Summers came in and mother and son talked for a long time.

"I wished now I had brought a different rig so I could drive you home," and with that Mrs. Summers departed.

When once more alone after the doctor left after talking with Mrs. Markland, Claremont told himself it was time he spoke to Gladys about his regards for her.

"Gladys, come here."

"Mother, is that Claremont speaking to me?"

"Yes, Gladys, he wants to speak to you alone, I think."

Gladys dashed away a hidden tear, came up to his bed with such a sad look on her face that Claremont said, "It is you that needs the couch, not me. Why, Gladys, I have nearly killed you with my illness."

"Oh, no, it is not that."

"Well, Gladys, put confidence in me and tell me all. I know something is wrong." Claremont took both her hands in his hands and smiled at her.

"Well, I will tell you I am sorry to lose you so soon."

"Say, Gladys, won't you be my wife?"

Fire! Burning Shingles

Pieces of burning Shingles will carry a long distance with the wind, and start other fires. Protect yourself by roofing with Steel Shingles or Corrugated Iron. I also have Steel Siding and Lath, both of which are a great aid in preventing fire.
