Colonial Heroes a Crooked Lot

Stark Calls Hancock a Defaulter Franklin a Thief, George Washington Simply Awful.

(Boston Post)

While proud Sons and Daughters of the Revolution and Bostonians of old Colonial stock were fuming with indignation at the remarks of Professor Edward Channing, of Harvard, who pointedly declared the Americans are the most unpatriotic people in the world, that George Washington was a pitiful blunderer, Ben. Franklin a "fourflusher," Patrick Henry a stock speculator, and the Earl of Dartmouth a blundering fool, there was one man in Boston who rubbed his hands, chuckled, and said "Channing is right, and he has got the nerve to say it."

The gentleman in question was Jas. H. Stark, of 254 Savin Hill avenue, Dorchester, author of the much discussed book, The Loyalists of Massachusetts, and not only did he repeat his praise of Channing to the Post representative, but he added a few historical additions which, if true, would tend to show the agitators and participators of our American Revolution to be a terrible lot of "low-brows" and "roughnecks."

"Why look here," said Mr. Stark, "as long as we are talking Harvard, did you know when John Hancock was treasurer of Harvard he defaulted large sums of the college money? Samuel Adams was a defaulter, too, and used funds belonging to the city of Boston when he was tax collector. All college professors who have studied, know these things to be so, only they haven't got the nerve to come out and state the truth."

"Isn't it ridiculous to find these men as they are lauded in the school books of the children, when they were a bunch of rascals. It is false patriotism and no country should stand on a foundation of lies."

"There are some things about Washington you couldn't print. Why, I knew of a man who was one of five to give $500 for a letter of Washington's, just for the purpose of tearing it up so that the reputation of the gentleman would continue good like in the eyes of young America. Is that patriotism? Well, I should say not. "And then there is Ben Franklin. When he was 67 years old he was dismissed from his office as postmaster of Boston on a charge of stealing letters from the mail."

"Any little thing about Paul Revere?" asked the Post man.

"Sure. According to one Henry Pelham, Revere stole his drawings of 'The Boston Massacre' and used them as works of his own. And likewise Revere was mixed up in a grafting deal when a lodge of Masons of which he was a member dissolved. Why all the men who precipitated the American Revolution were a cheap lot. No one can put a finger on the character of any of the loyalists who remained true to the King. They were the best people. The revolutionists were a crooked lot with everything to gain and nothing to lose. Their questionable characters were well known. It was significant when Washington cast his lot with them."

"It is all in my book and I have been criticized for it, but it is all the truth and I defy any man to prove to the contrary. I can back up all my facts."

"What is your idea of patriotism?" interrupted the Post man.

"Love of country and not the landings of men who were rascals," Professor Channing, in coming out as he has done a service to the people of America. No one need ever be afraid of the truth."

"Would America have been bigger under British rule?"

"Not as big, but a better country," came the answer. "All the riff-raff of the world wouldn't be here now, if England had held the reins. One of the most terrible things in modern history was inaugurated by these same revolutionists we are talking about. At the close of the war every one of the 13 colonies voted and put through the confiscation and banishment act, one of the greatest wrongs of civilization. This act was to the effect that all property belonging to Loyalists should be confiscated, and that all those who had remained true to the King should be banished. Thus some of the best people in the United States were driven into the forests of Canada. If that act had not been passed, Canada would be a part of the United States now. The bitterness of this act is still in the hearts of all Canadians today, and if you would know it, that is why Canada did not accept the United States reciprocity measure recently."

"You are an American citizen?" put in the Post man.

"Yes, sir, and I want to see some of this rottenness wiped out. I came to Boston in 1856 and was a British subject at that time."

World's Richest Man

The distinction undoubtedly belongs to the Czar of Russia, of whom it has been said that he has so much money that nobody can count it. And it is a fact that the wealth that is his as controller of the Russian Church, and as ruler of the Russians, including that of the members of his extremely wealthy family, would certainly be too great to count including as it does all the wealth of Russia, which is estimated at $7,000,000,000.

The czar's personal wealth, according to one statistical genius, works out at $110,000 a day, and should Russia get down to its last cent—or rather kopek—in the royal exchequer Nicholas, single handed could keep the Russian army in the field for several weeks.

Most of the czar's wealth is derived from landed possessions, of which he has nearly 150,000,000 acres, three quarters of which is rich timber and yielding big rentals. The other quarter is mining land. Siberia's mines are owned by the czar, while his jewelry and art works are of fabulous wealth. The czar's state income is about $2,000,000,000 out of which, however, he has to provide for the expenses of his household, which includes the upkeep of more than a hundred palaces to say nothing of the Russian court, with its 20,000 servants, 230 automobiles, 5000 thoroughbred horses, and an army of several thousand soldiers and detectives.—The Bits.
