Harbor Main Election

The returns of the election contest in the District of Harbor Main came as a surprise vesterday morning, but not to the Opposition. The work done in that district by the latter party meant that a clear gain would be made by supporters of the cause, and expectations were not without realisation. Though returned by smaller majorities than in the general election of victory without parallel in the annals of political history in Newfoundland. All the weight and influence of the Government were thrown into the scale, but it is noteworthy that the free and independent electors could not be cajoled by promises or bluffed by threats into voting for the candidates of the Government. All the to get through; all ships in sight; weight and force of political saw a few bedlamers and old harps; and sectarian influence was flung all well. into the scale in an effort, on the part of Government henchmen, to turn the popular tide in favor of their party. But Harbor Main would have none of it. Electors there were determined in water; all well. that the domination of Coaker should cease, and that the North should no longer run the South all well; no men on ice. and West.
