She carried 75 cabin passengers. The Amerique was somewhat smaller than the Ville de Havre, but similarly built. She was a new vessel, having been built last year at Newcastle-on-Tyne, England. Dominion Parliament.

Ottawa, April 16.

Mr. Mason renewed the debate on the expulsion of Louis Riel. He reviewed the several circumstances connected with the troubles in the North West, and handled Dr. Blultz very severely for the latter's conduct in relation to those events and his speech of the previous evening. He argued that in the face of the belief in an amnesty having been granted, and the inquiry now proceeding before a Committee of the House, either the amendment of the House, either the amendment of the House, in the seventh of the the seventh of the the seventh of the seventh of that action should be deferred pending the report of the Committee now sitting.

Mr. Ouimet supported the amendment to the amendment, and had not concluded his speech when the hour of recess arrived. He resumed after recess, and when he concluded was followed by Mr. Laurier, who spoke in English with little less fitnency than he had on a former occasion addressed the House in his own language. He applied himself to the argument that they I ad no evidence before them to justify the expulsion of Riel at the present moment; and therefore should adopt the amendment of Mr. Holton.

Mr. Desjardine, in French, argued against Mr. Mousseau's proposition, and in favour of Mr. Holton's amendment.

Mr. Holton's amendment, seeking to delay the action of the House until the Committee now sitting shall have reported, was next put and lost by Yeas 76; Nays, 117.

At half-past nine o'clock the members were called in.

Mr. Mousseau's amendment in favour of an amuesty was first put and lost by Yeas; 27; Nays 164.

Mr. Bowell's motion in favour of Riol's expulsion was then put and carried by Yeas, 124; N vys 68.

Dr. Schuttz then moved, and Mr. Bowell seconded, the formal motion that Louis Riel be expelled, which was declared carried on the same division.

The House then adjourned.

Fire on the Elora Road.

At about ten o'clock this morning Mrs.
Maddock, who lives on the west side o the Elora Road, two doors south of MeTague street, having occasion to go from the dining room to the summer kitchen, noticed that the north wall of the latter s of pine boards, forms the partition is of pine boards, forms the partition between Maddock's kitchen and that of Mr. Jacob Hornbustle, who occupies the house next door north. Immediately the c'arm was raised, and the whole the meantime word had been sent to the fire department; and Messrs. J. M. Bond & Co. had despatched a fire extinguisher to the scene. Besides the assistance rendered by the neighbors, this was the only force at hand to resust the flames, which spread rapidly to both sheds, the wind blowing from the east around the corners of the houses and through the passage-way between. Shortly after ten o'clock the engine was steaming northward, accompanied by an immense crowd of curious citizens. The hose followed a long way in the rear, being impeded in its progress by the fractious horses that had been seized in the "hot haste," and fastened to the cart. The continual tinkling of the bell,—which serves in times of peace as an ornament to the hose-cart,—fightened the excited animals so that they did nothing but dance and frantically endeavor to be released from their misery. Some ardent citizens, seeing the state of affairs, and knowing that the hose was indispensable when a stream of water was required, kindly lent their aid to "help the thing along," and in this way the corner of London Road and Elora Road was reached. Here the engine had stopped, and after some time the hose was attached, and a stream sent along to extinguish the flames. It was about halfpast ten before this stream was in perfect operation, but it smothered what fire had been left burning by the little extinguisher, which had done excellent service in confining the flames to the shed, leaving the houses proper with only a singe. At about eleven o'clock the hose was much upon the eart, and the men who had taken command of it returned, accompanied by the engine.

Both houses were insured, so that there will be little loss beside that sustained by damage to the furniture, which must be considerable, as almost every article in Mr. Maddock's house was carried into the street. Had it not been that the high wind was blowing from the east, nothing could have saved the frame houses from total destruction.

The cause of the fire is not positively known, as when M
