THE TORONTO GLOBE AND THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

Our enterprising Toronto contemporary is daily making some new discovery in reference to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. In its issue of Friday it informs its readers that "The last deliverance of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council is an opinion and not a judgment." The declaration of our contemporary is peculiar.

The opinion of their Lordships differs from that of our contemporary; so, too, does that of the official reporters, for they were of opinion that the deliverance of their Lordships was a judgment, and they reported it as such, and it will be found along with other judgments of their Lordships in the Law

The words of the Canadian statute authorizing the appeal are: "The opinion of the court upon any such reference (i.e., the Supreme Court) although advisory only, shall for all purposes of appeal to her Majesty in Council, be treated as a final judgment of the said court between the parties."

In the sense in which the judgment of the Supreme Court is an opinion, all judgments of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council are opinions. So, too, are the judgments of all the prize courts in Christendom. No judgment of the Judicial Committee is other than advice to the sovereign, which the sovereign sanotions subsequently upon advice of her constitutional Ministry. The decision of the committee never operates as the judgment of an ordinary judicial tribunal. It is not a court, but a Council of State. The statute which creates it authorizes it not to hear and determine, but to hear and report. The words are, "such appeals, causes and matters shall be heard by the said Judicial Committee, and a report or recommendation thereon shall be made to his Majesty in Council for his decision thereon."

In the first Manitoba case their Lordships conclude their report as follows: "In the result their Lordships will humbly advise her Majesty that these appeals ought to be allowed with costs.' And in the second appeal they say: "Their Lordships will humbly advise her Majesty that the questions submitted should be answered in the manner indicated by the views which they have expressed. There will be no costs of this appeal." In both cases there is a reasoned judgment. Upon the second the Judicial Committee make a report which concludes in these words: "And in case your Majesty should be pleased to approve of this report, then their Lordships so direct that the parties do bear their own costs of this appeal, and that the sum of £300 sterling so deposited by the appellants as aforesaid be repaid to them." Now what did her Majesty do with regard to this report? "Her Majesty having taken the said report into consideration, was pleased by and with the advice of her Privy Council to approve thereof, and to order as it is hereby ordered that the recommendations and directions therein contained be punctually observed and obeyed and carried into effect in each and every particular. Whereof the Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada for the time being, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice and govern themselves accordingly."

Our contemporary thinks they ought to take no notice, and to refuse to govern themselves accordingly; that there no authority to order and no constitutional duty to obey. It is clear that both the Judicial Committee and her Majesty's responsible advisers were of a wholly different opinion, and we think on a question of constitutional law they are safer and more authorita-Canada than our esteemed contempor- this is the center—the drought has done Canada than our esteemed contemporatively little damage, whereas and gives a clear and be comparatively little damage, whereas for sale by W. their conclusions with more confidence. No rule is better settled in the practice than this: "That her Majesty cannot with propriety be advised to refer to a Committee of Council in England a question which her Majesty in Council has no authority to determine, and on which the opinion of the Privy Council would not be binding on the parties in the Dominion of Canada." Here the parties are clothed with a limited sovereignty, and there is no coercive authority to enforce obedience to the Queen's order made under the sanction of law, but there is a constitutional presumption that every State

"Let justice be done." It is indeed late in the century to seek to bring the law and its expounders into disrepute, and to revive the doctrine of the Stuarts in a modified form, and to argue that the supreme law should not bind either the Legislature of a Province or the Federal Parliafunctionary will conform to the law, and this is a reasonable presumption, for "law imputes an intention on the part of every official to fulfill the obligations falling within his jurisdiction,"

Hon. Edward Blake, M. P. for South Longford, is expected in Canada on a visit soon. By the way, now that Mr. Justin McCarthy has announced that he will resign the leadership of the Irish M.P.s, the Detroit Free Press advocates that our fellow-countryman should be chosen as his successor.

It would be too bad if the legal proceedings taken against London City should have the effect of delaying the work of laying the new pavements so as to interfere with fall business.

In the recent elections the Victoria Australia) electors refused to longer maintain a "protective" tariff. The workers found, as in Canada, that high taxation injured rather than helped the great mass of the people. Even those alleged to be helped by the system suffered. In the boot-making trade, where there has been an import duty of $1 25 per pair, wages are now so low titioned for assistance to emigrate to the gold fields. They stated that they were almost on the verge of starvation. Experience teaches much more effectively than does the promise of interested agents of monopoiles, or of governments kept in power by monopoly

An English cable correspondent reports an alarming increase in divorce suits. He suggests that the added numbers is probably owing to the great increase in lunacy. The man or woman who qualifies for the divorce court is certainly loose in mental make-up.

That other Oliver in British politics ruled until he died, and it seems as if the Ontario Premier had made up his mind to do the same. But whether he rules or retires, long may he live .-Montreal Star.

BRITISH DAIRYMEN MAY VISIT

There is a probability that the British Dairy Farmers' Association may hold its next annual convention in Canada. The matter has been discussed by the council, which fixes the meeting place. Mr. Pocock urged that visit to Canada would be of great interest and practical value, and Mr. Webb, who is interested in several Canadian industries, and others, said this suggestion was worthy of consideration. The secretary stated that several members had already expressed their wish to visit Canada whenever the association organized such a trip. We are sure that the dairymen of Canada would warmly welcome a visit from their progressive English brethren.

How would it do to invite the English association to hold a joint convention with the Western Ontario Dairymén's Association, say, in this city. Right around here, in the counties of Middlesex, Oxford, Huron, Elgin and Perth, we have the most advanced dairymen on this continent. A comparison and mutual criticism of methods would be invaluable.

WHAT CAUSES DROUGHT: In an interview given elsewhere, Professor Wiggins, of Ottawa, states that the drought which has prevailed in Ontario this year is caused, as in 1887, by the absorption of electricity by the telegraph wires, which now are plentiful throughout the country. The doctor talks entertainingly, but he seems to be a trifle off in his deductions, or how comes it that in Western Ontario-in the district of which in Grey and Bruce counties great havoc has overtaken the crops? There are far more electric wires in this part of Canada than there is in the region bordering on Georgian Bay, which has suffered the greatest injury.

HARSH ARRESTS UNNECESSARY IN LONDON.

The case of George Smart, errested on Sunday forenoon for obstructing City Policeman Monaghan while impounding his cow, deserves more than passing notice. While constables must be protected in the execution of their duty, the Chief and Police Commissioners should see to it that their men are not unduly officious in making unnecessary arrests.

Taking the evidence as given at the Police Court as our guide, we reach the conclusion that no matter how the law may be stretched, the arrest of George Smart was absolutely unnecessary, and the conduct of the officer, in handcuffing a well-known and respected citizen, and dragging him through the streets to the cells, was also unwarranted. The constable, it seems, picked up Mr. Smart's cow, which had broken out of a pasture field, and was driving her to the pound. With but an imperfect knowledge of the law, Mr. Smart attempted to regain possession of the animal, whereupon he was arrested, and though he was in his shirtsleeves, and pleaded to be allowed to to his home near-by to get his coat, the constable refused this very modest request, and instead handcuffed him, and took him to the station, while the streets were crowded with church-Though Mr. Smart had been a murderer instead of a mere breaker of a city bylaw, he could not have been treated with less consideration, and probably no one more than the officer, in his cooler moments, would be ready to concede this.

If Mr. Smart had resisted arrest, if he had refused even to give his correct name and address, one might concede that it was right to submit him to the indignity of being handcuffed and dragged to the police station. But surely in a case of this kind, the policeman would have been doing his full duty if he had accompanied Mr. Smart to his home, satisfied himself of the man's bona fides, and duly summoned him before the court.

A TERROR TO EVIL-DOERS. Whether Holmes, the man charged with wholesale murder, is tried at Philadelphia or Toronto is of small moment, provided the law can reach him, and its administrators are not tampered with. So far the most direct evidence against Holmes has been found in Toronto, where he is held for trial for brutally slaying the Pietzel children, and if he is placed on trial for the murder of their father first, it will be because the Philadelphia officials believe that they can convict him of that crime. If not, he will certainly be sent to Canada,

It is with satisfaction that we read in our United States contemporaries strong tributes to the efficiency with which the criminal law is administered in this Province. They tell us that criminal justice is administered more certainly and more promptly in the courts of the Dominion than in those of all of the American States. "The probabilities of a criminal getting his dues in Canada," remarks the Chicago Record, "are ten times greater than they are in Chicago. "A trial in Chicago," adds our contemporary, "would be protracted for months, and would end in a disagreement of the jury."

The criminal gets fair play here, but no more. That is all a prisoner has a right to expect, whether he be guilty or not guilty. The delays of justice over the border have become scandalous. Holmes could not have been well acquainted with our methods of doing business, or he would never have extended his line of operations over the

A charming story is that told by Rev. Egerton R. Young, the intrepid Northwest missionary, in his new romance recently published. Its title is "Oowikapun, or How the Gospel Reached the Nelson River Indians." A beautiful picture of Indian life in the far north is given. The habits of the aborigine, their homes, the bravery of their men and women, and love-making, are portrayed. It is shown what a heroic maiden was willing to suffer in order that she might be faithful to the Christian truth, once imparted to her, and take it to her people. The story should do much to inspire an interest in missionary effort. (Toronto, Wm. Briggs, publisher.)

Dr. Bourinot, clerk of the Canadian House of Commons, has written several works on Canada and her constitution, but until he issued his latest book none were specially adapted to the needs of the masses. In his new work, "How Canada Is Governed," Dr. Bourinot meets this want. It gives a short account of the executive, judicial and municipal institutions of the Dominion, with an outline of their development. It is a citizen's manual, and there is very little in connection with the management of the country that a student cannot with ease glean from its well arranged chapters. the Dominion and other illustrations add to its attractiveness. The Sting Within.

It is said there is a rankling thorn in very heart, and yet that none would exchange their own for that of another. Be that as it may, the sting arising from heart of a corn is real enough, and in this land of tight boots a very common complaint also. Putnam's Pain-less Corn Extractor is a never-falling remedy for this kind of heartache, as you can easily prove if affiicted. Cheap, sure, painless. Try the genuine and use
