A Good Word for Presbyterianism. (From the Chicago Interior.)

(From the Chicago Interior.)

Presbyterianism has always been Christianity militant. As Mr. Froude says, Calvinism has always been Christianity militant. As Mr. Froude says, Calvinism has always "preferred to be ground to powder, like fliat, rather than bend before force or mels under enervating temptation." We may be "God's coularly people." These qualities of intellectual and spiritual sturdiness have made Presbyterianism, in its various forms, one of the greatest history making powers the world has ever seen. Mr. John Morley is not a man of very great reverence, nevertheless, he understands as few men do, the causes that have produced the western world. He testifies that "to omit Calvin from the forces of Western evolution is to read history with one eye shut. To say that Hobbes and Cromwell stand for the positive results of the intellectual revolution in Protestant countries, and that Calvin does not, is to ignore what the Calvinistic churches were and what they have done for social and moral causes in the old world and in the new. We cannot but see that, compared with Calvin, Hobbes and Cromwell are hardly more than names writ in water." No less striking than this channer. The various selections pisyed along the route were, coandering the dishifties under which a newly increasingly billions, proceedingly of the control of the contro

Bisaster to a Sunday Sailing Party on Cataraqui Bay.

Kingstox, Ont., May 21.—While four young men, named Dr. Hector MacDonald, Peter Bureau, Dr. Alexander Bureau and Wm. Lyle, of Morrisburg, were sailing on Cataraqui Bay this atternoon, the sailboat upset and all four went into the water. Men on shore saw the accident, went to the rescue and succeeded in landing them all on shore.

Shortly afterward MacDonald and one of his companions went out in another boat to recover the upturned craft, when they were again upset, and before assistance arrived MacDonald went to the bottom and was drowned. MacDonald's companion was nearly unconscious when rescued. The unfortunate young man graduated as an M. D. from the Royal Medical College a couple of months ago, and was preparing to leave the city to practice. MacDonald was about 21 years of age.
