Grand patrons are treated to a double feature bill of exceptional mexit for the last three days of this week. Elaine Hammerstein, one of the few really great stars, is seen in "The Miracle of Manhattan," while Jimmy Aubrey, the famous comedian, brings tears to the famous comedian, brin and to-morrow than those of yesterday.

A cross section of New York life is shown in the feature film starring Miss Hammerstein. Scenes show not only the underworld, where crooks hold forth and life is held cheaply, but the upper strata, where the wealthy live in state and aggravate the lower classes with their lavish display of money. The story is what one might term a "crook play," and the interest of the spectator is uphed throughout the enthe progress of the film. Miss Hammerstein is supported by artists of recognized ability, such as Matt Mocre, Ellen classity, Jack Raymond, Warner Green, Lenora Ottinger and Nora Reed. Their support is particularly creditable.

Complications of a highly humorous nature are featured in the comedy picture "The Blizzard." Settings are as original as the story, which is saying something, and the whole offering is distinctly refreshing and a relief from the ordinary run of comedies. Jimmy Aubrey needs no introduction to most movie fans, but to the uninitiated he may be recommended as one of the few film stars who can get the maximum of laughs out of ever situation into which he is thrown.
