Bad Carriage Accident Injuring Occupants

Hon. W. H. Owen and Daughter Olive Thrown from Carriage Receiving Serious Injuries.—Mr. Owen's Condition Serious.

BRIDGEWATER, Aug. 8.—While the Hon. W. H. Owen, Mrs. Owen and two daughters, the Misses Hilda and Olive were driving down Maple Street this evening, a portion of the harness broke frightening the horse, which ran away. Mrs. Owen and Miss Hilda who were sitting behind, jumped from the carriage, but on turning into King Street the horse ran into a house on the opposite side, throwing Mr. Owen violently on the piazza, and Miss Olive beside the piazza and against a tree.

Mr. Owen sustained a deep and serious cut on the left temple, is badly bruised and shaken, and is considered in a serious condition. He is sixty-eight years of age, and a very heavy man. Miss Olive is cut about the face and much bruised. Doctors Rehuss and Freeman attended Mr. Owen, while Dr. Kelly looked after Miss Owen. The community is much excited over the accident, and widespread sympathy is heard on all sides for the injured ones and family.

Mount Allison Institutions

The question as to where to send your son or daughter for further education is answered by the Mount Allison advertisements in today's issue. There is no better preparatory school for boys than the Mount Allison Academy, one of the oldest of its kind in Canada. There is no better Commercial College in eastern Canada than the one in connection with the Academy. A residential school, instruction is given under conditions which the most thorough development of character.

The Mount Allison Ladies' College—which includes the College for Literature and Science, the Conservatory of Music, the Massey-Treble School of Household Science, the Oratory Department, the Owens Museum of Fine Arts—is the largest in Canada. All its teachers are specialists, the members of the Conservatory staff having been trained in Europe. Its equipment is extensive and thoroughly modern. The school aims to be, and is, a home-like institution where the development of the individual student along all lines is sought. In this fact is to be found the reason why the school has attained its leading position.

A calendar of the Academy and Commercial College will be sent free on application to Mr. J. M. Palmer, M. A., Sackville, N. B. The Ladies' College calendar will be sent free if application for it is made to Dr. B. C. Borden, Sackville, N. B.

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES DIPHTHERIA.

The warmest friends of Red Rose Tea are those who have tried some other brand said to be "as good as Red Rose" and for which they paid the same price. Very easy to say a thing is "as good" but not so easy to "make good."

Prices: 30c., 35c., 40c., 50c. and 60c.

Aged Farmer Robbed of Large Sum of Money

CONFIDENCE MEN FOUND MAN OF EIGHTY INTERESTED IN ELECTRIC BELTS

A Yarmouth correspondent sends a story of the loss of $1,250 through confidence men, already reported in the Herald. He says it was a Lunenburg man, aged eighty years, who parted with the snug sum of $1,250 when the circus was at Bridgewater. He met, on a road leading to Bridgewater, a man purporting to be interested in real estate, and with whom he entered into conversation. The old man's hobby appeared to be electric belts. They were soon joined by another, who was seeking an agent for electric belts, but before an appointment could be made it would be necessary for the applicant to put up standing.

The Web of the Wireless

St. John Times.—The pages of the sensational novel tell no more remarkable story than that of the murderer of Mrs. Crippen and the pursuit and his capture of Dr. Crippen and his paramour. The long quest is over, and justice will be done. The wireless telegraph enabled the author to locate the murderer in mid-Atlantic, and escape was impossible. The pair had sailed for Canada, hopeful of escape. They were unconscious as the steamship sped toward the St. Lawrence that the web of fate had closed around them and that the wireless operator on the Montrose had told all the world the story. This is the first great criminal case in which the wireless telegraph has played a part. Henceforth there will be a new terror for the fugitive from justice.

Port Wade

S. S. Catalone, Capt. Glover, sailed Saturday morning, 6th, for Scotland with a full load of hemite ore about 6,000 tons.

S. S. Patria, Capt. Lawson, came in to dock Saturday afternoon. This is another very nice boat which will carry 4,400 tons. She will finish loading in about eight or ten hours according to the working of the machinery.

A large barque for Annapolis has been anchored in the stream for the past week and while this shipping was in port a four-mast schooner passed along up to load lumber at Annapolis (forget her name). She was built at Granville Ferry.

Some of the optimistic ones begin to think that Port Wade has quite a brilliant future before her. Quite a number of men are employed here yet completing the works and perfecting the machinery.

Miss Winnie Litch came home from Beverly, Mass., Friday to stay indefinitely.

Quite a number of people went to Digby from here Saturday to see How's Circus and by special trip in the evening to see the moving pictures and to attend How's concert in the school grounds.

We are getting very poor haying weather. The crop is unusually large. Vegetables are looking fine.

James Slocumb with family moved over here from Digby last week. They are living with Mr. Slocumb's parents.

Mrs. Edw. Slocumb continues in a critical state of health.

Mr. Archibald of the firm of Reed & Archibald, was here last week settling their contract of business. Their foreman, Mr. D. C. Flemming, has gone up to Newcastle, N. B., where works of a similar character are being constructed by the Canadian Iron Co., and under contract of building by Messrs Reed & Archibald.

A large picnic was enjoyed here by Annapolis and Granville Ferry people on Friday, composed of the different denominations, Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterians. There was also a picnic from Digby Thursday afternoon.

Alliance For Trade and Commerce

Boston Herald Quotes an Interview with Harry J. Crowe, Regarding Commercial Union of English-Speaking Nations.— Would Strengthen Great Britain Against Ambitious Rivals of Both Countries

(Boston Herald)

Harry J. Crowe, the largest lumber operator in Newfoundland, at present residing in Toronto, who sold Lord Northcliffe that strip of Newfoundland measuring 3000 square miles, stopped in Boston yesterday on the way to Newfoundland and talked with a Herald reporter in favor of closer trade relations between the United States and Great Britain and her colonies.

He feared that there was very little sentiment in Canada for reciprocity with the United States. Instead, he suggested that the United States let in free of duty certain natural resources of Canada that are of particular value to this country. It was his idea that in return England include in the protective tariff, which he thinks there is some likelihood will be adopted, compensating tariff preferences for manufacturers of the United States and cancel her treaty with Japan, a country which he thinks is dangerous to the United States.

"While the sentiment is growing rapidly in Great Britain in favor of adopting protection, giving the colonies a preference, the objection raised by the extreme free-traders would be largely overcome," said Mr. Crowe. "If the sphere of preference were enlarged to include the United States, thus preventing the monopoly they fear the colonies would have by an exclusive preference."

WOULD INCREASE TRADE

"As for Canada and the other colonies a preference from the United States for the free admission of such articles as fish, wool and coal (which would be of equal advantage to the United States) would not only remove their objection to the United States) having an equal preference with them in the mother country, but would so cement the friendly relations now existing between the United States and the colonies that the United States would at least hold her present increasing trade relations with them, more particularly Canada, even without receiving further concessions in their tariff.

"The additional advantage of having a preference in the markets of Great Britain over such countries as Germany and Japan would be a fair and reasonable quid pro quo for the United States to give Great Britain some preference on the goods she now imports from foreign countries, thus not interfering with her own industries."

"A preference in the markets of Great Britain and friendly commercial relations with the colonies would be of such advantage to the manufacturing and laboring classes in the United States that even those of your foreign population who might not otherwise look with favor on closer relations with Great Britain would see such material advantages to themselves by the increased business resulting that they would not be inclined to oppose it, even though commercial interests of their own country should suffer."

JAPAN'S AMBITION

"It is very evident that Germany is determined upon striking a blow at the British Empire, as shown by her extraordinary naval program, and I believe that the ambition of Japan is not only to control the trade routes of the Pacific ocean, but to have dominion over a portion of those countries whose shores are washed by those waters, which would include English as well as American possessions."

"Her victory over China and Russia removed two great obstacles. Her treaty with Great Britain was another step toward realizing this great dream, as it has given Japan time for preparation before making her final move. This last obstacle in her way is the United States. Having a strong, skillfully manned fleet, it might be possible, with her convenient naval bases, to get possession of the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands in their present state of defence. With those additional naval bases and an army of over 1,000,000 trained soldiers, I venture to say that Japan would be a formidable foe to prevent landing and holding at least part of the Pacific coast between Alaska and California."

"The fact of the United States violating her treaty with Japan is not extending to her citizens the same privileges that are granted to other foreigners would be sufficient cause to justify her to precipitate a war, which she will probably do as soon as the time comes when she is properly prepared—unless checked in the meantime by the union of the English-speaking nations. This of course would necessitate Great Britain cancelling her Anglo-Japanese treaty, which I do not think is at all popular, either in Great Britain or her colonies."

COMMERCIAL UNION FIRST

"I think, however, that an offensive and defensive alliance between the English-speaking nations would have to be preceded by a commercial alliance. No doubt England and the United States will hesitate taking this step, fearing that the other nations will look with disfavor upon this English alliance. I think France and possibly Italy and Russia would not raise any objection to such an alliance, as it would strengthen Great Britain, their natural ally, against the nations they have most cause to fear."

"Germany and Japan are practically the only countries that are showing an ambition for expansion that will require a war to satisfy, and who would consider that their political and commercial interests would be interfered with by an alliance of the English-speaking nations. The natural products of France, Russia, Italy, Norway and Sweden would suffer little, if any, by the United States having preference in the markets of Great Britain. Therefore such an alliance should have the support of the majority of foreign nations."
