Law and Chance.

Men are now in the great arena of princide, the great arena of scientific study, and the advancement has been great, but as a universe of races and nations the world is yet very far away from intellectual perfection. Even now men say, "Let us take our chances," when they should say, "Let us seek the law and follow it." There are persons to-day who will not start on a journey without carrying a charm against danger in the form of some sacred omblem, who will not become one of a party of thirteen; who will undertake no duty or mission on Friday. One cannot believe that the infinite God would rely on any certain day or horsehoes to do certain things, or that Fridays or that thirteens would deter Him from doing other things. But men have not yet fully escaped the superstition that the earth contains fairies and elves who make it their especial business to look after those unlucky enough to have crossed their knife and fork or spilled the salt at the table, or have look ed at the moon over the left shoulder. As tronomers say that Arcturus has for centuries been travelling toward the earth at the rate of 3,000 400 miles a day, or that in a month it travels the distance which intervenes be-tween the earth and the sun. Yet, with tween the earth and the sun i let, with this great velocity Arcturus will not reach the earth within 50,000 years. Such a vast kingdom must be governed by a great power whose laws apply to the smallest details in the life of mankind as well as the workings of things most sublime. It must obey the mandate of the one great mind and one set of great, clearly-defined and self-evident principles.—[Prof. Swing.
