

Capt.(N) R.H. Thomas, a Senior Defence Fellow since September 1991, conducted a detailed study of future structural options for the Canadian Navy, to appear as a Working Paper entitled "The Canadian Navy: Options for the Future."

Commissioned

"National Defence and the Canadian Economy," Paul Buteux (University of Manitoba), principal researcher.

Peacekeeping, Peacemaking and Peacebuilding

In-house

Robin Hay continued as the lead researcher in this area, co-organizing the Institute's July 1991 international workshop on "Civilian Aspects of Peacekeeping." He also began a major study on "Peacekeeping and Humanitarian Assistance."

Commissioned

"The Research Centre for International Organizations," Paul Dussault (University of Ottawa), principal researcher.

"Escalation and Mediation," Brian Tomlin, Harald von Riekhoff, and Brian Mandell (Carleton University), principal researchers.

"Aid as Peacemaker: Canadian Development Assistance and Third World Conflicts," Robert Miller (Parliamentary Centre), principal researcher.

"The Future of the UN System," John Trent and Paul Dussault (University of Ottawa), and Gene Lyons (Dartmouth College), principal researchers.

"Reconstructing International Peace and Security: A Role for Canada in United Nations Reform," Andrew Knight (York University), principal researcher.

Regional Conflicts and Security Issues

In-house

Deirdre Collings managed the last two of the four Institute workshops on the Lebanese conflict, "Peace for Lebanon? Obstacles, Challenges, Prospects" in June 1991 and "The Lebanon of the Future" in November. She also began preparations for the production of an edited volume of selected workshop papers from the Lebanon project.

Ron Fisher completed his work on "Third Party Consultation and International Conflict." He also finished the editing of a book arising from the Institute's multi-year project on Cyprus, and organized a series of seminars on conflict resolution (on Namibia, Cyprus, and the Gulf crisis) at the Institute in May and June, followed by a "Conflict Analysis Workshop on Cyprus" in England in June.

Mark Heller served as Research Coordinator until January 1992, while continuing his own work on Middle Eastern security issues.

Ross Mallick carried out preliminary work on the potential contribution of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation to regional confidence-building and conflict resolution.

Ron Purver worked as the principal organizer of an international workshop on "Arms Control and Confidence-Building in the North Pacific," scheduled for May 1992, as part of the non-governmental "track" of the government's North Pacific Cooperative Security Dialogue.

Commissioned

"Canadian Policy Towards Southern Africa," Heribert Adam (Simon Fraser University) and Kogila Moodly (University of British Columbia), principal researchers.

New Threats and Approaches to International Security

In-house

Shaukat Hassan continued as the lead researcher on environmental issues and served as a member of the Environmental Security Panel of the Canadian Global Change Program. He also began working on a major study entitled "People as Weapons: The Population Issue and UNCED."

Father William Ryan completed his work on "Religion and International Affairs," managing the last three of a series of five seminars on the topic at the Institute in April and May.