

Sardines canned	Kuala Lumpur
Frozen salmon	Paris
Scallops	New York
Scallops frozen	Stockholm
Sea cucumber dried	Hong Kong
Sea urchins	Osaka
Sharks fins dried	Hong Kong
Shellfish	Atlanta
Shellfish	Detroit
Shrimp	Copenhagen
Shrimp	London
Shrimp - Shell-off IQF cooked	Stockholm
Shrimps	Berne
Shrimps	Berne
Shrimps	Dusseldorf
Smelt	Tokyo
Smoke frozen salmon	Singapore
Smoked fish	Vienna
Smoked fish (excluding salmon)	Kuala Lumpur
Smoked hake	Melbourne
Smoked hake	Sydney
Smoked herring	Port-of-Spain
Smoked salmon	Dusseldorf
Smoked salmon	Sao Paulo
Squid	Moscow
Squid dried	Hong Kong
Squid frozen	Hong Kong
Squid tubes	Melbourne
Squid tubes	Sydney
Surimi	Atlanta
Surimi products	Atlanta
Tuna	Singapore
Tuna canned	Kuala Lumpur
Turbot	Boston
Various dried fish	Sao Paulo
Wet salted cod, incl. fillets	Madrid
Yellow Perch	Berne

The traditional US market for Canadian redfish products, e.g., fresh or frozen fillets, has been generally stable over the past years and will likely remain so in the foreseeable future. Canada's share of this market is expected to expand given that competing supplies from producers in the USA and in Iceland are expected to continue to drop. In addition, the ethnic-oriented specialty markets in the USA could provide opportunities for new products from Canada, e.g., marinated redfish fillets, fillet portions (from large fish), etc.

Turbot:

In the US market, turbot fillets have always benefited from sufficient marketing support, to compete directly with the more