Toronto, Sept. 5.-Eleven evangellets, representing a number of denommations, met at the home of Messrs. Hunter and Crossley, Palmerston avenue, and a conference was held, when It was unanimously agreed to form an evangelistic association to be called the Canadian Association of Evangel-1sts (international).

The object of the association is the promotion of evangelism throughout the Dominion of Canada, and the mutual co-operation and fellowship of those engaged exclusively in evangelistic work.

Officers elected were: President, Rev. J. E. Hunter; secretary, Rev. W. Meikle; treasurer, Rev. A. E. Ranton; executive committee, Messrs. Will Pugsley, J. McD. Kerr and Walter Russell, with the officers members ex-

Washington, Sept. 5.-It is author-Itatively stated at the United States navy department that President Roosevelt does not contemplate the erection of two battleship fleets. Nor does Secretary Metcalfe, nor even the general board favor either the division of the present magnificent fleet under Admiral Evans' command or the erection of another fleet in order that there may be a formidable American navy in both oceans—the Atlantic and the Pacific.

It is regarded a better policy to maintain one perfectly equipped and well-drilled fleet, free to move speedily to any part of the globe at short notice, and the present plans contemplate the increase of the strength of the existing Atlantic fleet from eighteen to twenty-eight battleships. This will afford a command as large as can be properly directed by any one officer, and it will moreover about mark the capacity of the ports and drydocks in any particular section of

WEDDING FEAST

A House of Gloom, as Depicted in Dickens' "Great Expectations."

London, Sept. 5.-A Dickens novel in real life is provided by the romance recently unearthed that clings around a deserted house at 10, Queen's Gate, Kensington. As in "Great Expectations," the plot is concerned with a canceled wedding and the grief that found expression in leaving the rooms, all prepared for the festival, to molder and decay in loneliness and gloom. It was in June, 1860, that the tenant was engaged to be married to the beautiful young daughter of a well-known London merchant. The prospective bridegroom was wealthy, and furnished the six-story mansion, with its twenty rooms, in the most luxurious style as a home for the woman he loved. The wedding breakfast was laid in the great reception room on the first floor, and all arrangements made for homecoming of the bride bridegroom. But it was rumored that the young lady herself objected to the match, which was stated to have been forced upon her by her parents.

On the morning of the wedding bridegroom ordered round his now old-fashioned carriage and pair from the mews at the back of the house. They stood outside the front to walk down the steps another carriage came bowling up the road. In the carriage was his bride-elect, accompanied by a strange young man coolie class.

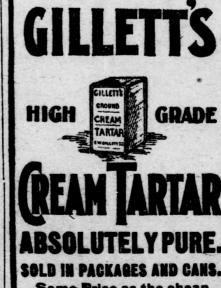

The captain of the Teucer reports lover, and drove past the house in that when the news of the successful triumph after a hasty wedding at the local church by special license. That same day the great house was closed, and-it has remained in the same condition ever since. Tradition has it that the beautiful pair of bays to draw the wedding coach were at once shot, and the carriage taken back to the mews, where it has remained ever since. The room in which the wedding breakfast was to have been served was locked up just as it was
