The Inside Workings of a Great Store.

In this month's "Everybody's" appears an article by Hartley Davis showing from invoice to sale how the inner mechanism of a department store works.

These great modern institutions were first introduced, it appears, to do away with the haggling, system of buying and selling. The "Bon Marche" of Paris was the first successful one on the "ticketed price" system, and following it were A. T. Stewart's store in the United States before the civil war, and John Wanamaker's later on. Now the principle is a very simple one. Each department has to make a certain per cent, every year, averaging about 7 per cent, and all departments must make an equal amount. Manufacturers are often puzzled by this rule, which will cause a manager to refuse goods on which 15 per cent. profit is made in one department as "too profitable," while in another department, goods netting 40 per cent. are "not profitable enough."

able enough."

Many people pride themselves on the fact that they are quite impervious to bargains. They don't believe all this stuff in the papers about reductions, etc. Bargains are mostly cheats to eatch silly women.

catch silly women.

This is not the case at all. The manufacturer it is who is obliged to clear out his old stock every year. Go into any wholesale house and you will be told, "No, we haven't a single hat of last year's. We sell to the department stores and outside milliners till we have absolutely nothing left. That is our rule."

Because that volume of business

For diverse of the shiking of the saling barge Germaine by the steamer Imperial belonging to the St. Lawrence Navigation Company.

The steamer was leaving port when it suddenly swerved from the centre of the river and rammed the barge which was tited to her dock, tinking her at once. Captain Spain found that the accident was due entirely to the careless handling of the Imperial and the master. William Paul, was severely censured and warned that he must be more careful. In his judgment Capt. Spain sharply criticised the haphazard manner in which the Imperial was run and also recommended that the department of marine should deal with the inspector of hulls for neglect of duty in not seeing that the boat was properly equipped.

The damage caused by the collision will probably amount to three or four thousand dollars.
