The following Lines on muste from a person, who has tank deep of the cup of sorrow, and should the Editor f the ODERWER think fit to give them a place in his shubble paper, they are at his service.

Tarewell to my home, to my ever dear cotten. The pride of my youth, and the sweet hope of At the shrine of stern exigence, we ever muss No future will answer—but duty says now.

Though I love thee so dearly—still from thee I go, Like the patriarch's dove, rarely cest I can know; Perchance some kind angel will lend me bis aid, Till short life is pass'd and my exit is made.

Then fortune is smiling, beneath its bright sun We seem to feel happy, but it smires and is gone; reverses the action, and changes the scene, or life's but a vapour, and pleasure a dream. Once I thought in my cottage I ever should dwell I had pence, I had pleasure-seldom sorrow could te I found by experience the sweet dream had alloy, For a virulent gangrene corooded my joy.

For a virulent gangrene orroaded my joy.

I rais'd my ambition my grief to redress,
But misfortunt closed round me as if to caress;
I made one last effort my peace to sustain,
But grief was the purchase—yea exquisite pain.

Reminiscence is blinding my ocular sense,
To renel it I exercise feeble defence;
An exile I wander, among strangers I roam,
Having left my dear partner, & sweet pleasant home

From the Perth Courier.

A Parody on Bruce's Address to his Soldiers Friends who never has been led, Wedlock's thorny paths to tread, Welcome to the downy bed Of glorious liberty.

Now's the day and now's the hour, Ere the clouds of marriage lour, Welcome to the blissfu' bow'r Of calm felicity.

Wha wad be a hen-pecked knave t Wha wad not submission brave t Wha wad be a woman's slave t To Hymen let him flee.

Wha for freedom's glorious law, Wad not gie his lite—his a'. Freemon stand of freemon fa', Eachelors! on wi' me!

By starvation's groups and paids;
By tormenting wives and weens,—
While there's blood within our veius,
We shall aye be free.

Lay the thoughts o' marriage low; Women is man's mortal foe; Let each breast with ardour glow, For glorious liberty.

The great Hebrew Syngagone in Doke's, place, was on Monday night broken open and robbed by persons as yet unknown. They took from the ark the manuscript of the laws of Mossik were richly ornamented with massy silver rollers and bells; with the silver they made off, but the manuscripts, which were written on parchament, were torn and cut in several parts, and scattered about the floor. The great loss consists in the manuscripts, which were written on parchament, were torn and cut in several parts, and scattered about the floor. Thus, be found the legislature in session, and the senators, in consequence of the poverty of the place, living entirely on salt pork, and sleeping three in a bed!

Durk Eyes.—I never could fancy a dark cye in woman, notwithstanding the praises lavished upon it by poets. There is something actually wicked in its glance—you feel its power indeed, but it is the power of the light-like of flash, astonishing yet filling with awe. There is more of sublimity in the dark eye, but less of beauty than in a blue—to the for-

A Whig administration has never been able to maintain itself in England. Will the present it is the universal interrogatory. It promises well as yet. It speaks flatteringly to the militude; but we fear it is not destined to a longer existence than its predecessors. Why we think so it would be premature to discuss so early.—Allas.

Railway.—The expense of making the new Railway from Liverpool to Manchester was £35,000 a mile! The canal it has so much effected, and whose shares have fallen so low, was made at one guinea per inch! The total expense of the railway, when finished, is calculated at £1,200,000 sterling. It is said that when there is, by a railway, direct communication from London to Liverpool, the journey will be accomplished in seven hours!—Glasgow Chvonicle.
