Affair Conducted Under Auspices of the Ladies' Hospital Committee of K. of C. Army Huts—Furnish Smokes and Sweets to Patients—Themselves Entertained.

No concert ever gave more pleasure than did that which had for its audience yesterday afternoon, the patients and staff of the East St. John County Hospital. The concert was the first to be given by St. John performers and the second which had been held in the hospital since its opening, the first being that of the Boston Opera Company. Yesterday's concert was arranged under the auspices of the ladies' hospital committee of the K. of C. Army Huts. To Miss Amelia Haley, the efficient organizer, all praise and credit are due for the complete success of the entertainment. All of those who took part in the programme excelled their usual skill, the audience's most evident appreciation being for the best that was in them. Dr. Farris in thanking the committee and those who took part in the concert on behalf of the staff and patients, said that the cheerful effects of the splendid entertainment would be felt for weeks. A tour of the hospital and the nurses' home was made by the visitors after the concert and before leaving they distributed cigarettes, tobacco and magazines to the soldiers and were served with dainty refreshments by the hospital authorities.

The programme of the concert was as follows:

AUTO-INTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Absolutely Prevents This Dangerous Condition

The chief cause of poor health is our neglect of the bowels. Waste matter, instead of passing from the lower intestine regularly every day, is allowed to remain there, generating poisons which are absorbed by the blood.

In other words, a person who is habitually constipated, is poisoning himself. We know nothing of the Auto-intoxication, due to non-action of the bowels, is directly responsible for serious Kidney and Bladder Trouble; that it upsets the Stomach, causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Sleeplessness; that chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Pain in the Back, are relieved as soon as the bowels become regular; and that Pimples, Rash, Eczema and other Skin Affections disappear when "Fruit-a-tives" are taken to correct Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" will protect you against Auto-intoxication because this wonderful fruit medicine acts directly on all the eliminating organs.

FINE FOR SPEEDING BUT DID ALL THEY COULD FOR CHILD

Fred Hickey Exonerated on More Serious Charge Arising Out of Accident in Loch Lomond Road.

Saturday, August 30.
Alexander Crawford, the complainant, charged with speeding on the Loch Lomond road, with not giving a warning and not returning to give assistance to a child whom his automobile had knocked down and run over, was heard before Magistrate H. G. S. Adams, at Brookville, last evening. The defendant pleaded guilty to the first two charges and was exonerated absolutely so far as the third charge, that of not returning to give assistance, was concerned. For each of the first two charges a fine of $50 and costs was imposed.

The case of Frederick Robert Hickey, charged with speeding on the Loch Lomond road, with not giving a warning and not returning to give assistance to a child whom his automobile had knocked down and run over, was heard before Magistrate H. G. S. Adams, at Brookville, last evening. The defendant pleaded guilty to the first two charges and was exonerated absolutely so far as the third charge, that of not returning to give assistance, was concerned. For each of the first two charges a fine of $50 and costs was imposed.

James Power, sworn, said that he saw the accident happen and was going toward the place to help give attention to the girl when he met the automobile which was between him and the child. When he got to the car both occupants had got out of the automobile and appeared as though they were anxious to see what had happened. Witness informed them and told them that, as he thought, the best thing they could do would be to go and get a doctor. They asked him where they could get a doctor and he advised them to go to the Ben Lomond House and telephone from there to the city for a physician. This they immediately did.

Mr. Hickey, a young man of only about eighteen years of age, told a very straightforward story which corroborated the evidence given by Mr. Power. After he had had a doctor summoned by telephone from the Barker House, he returned to the scene of the accident by returning to the scene of the accident he returned to the city. When he arrived home he telephoned to Dr. Baxter to inquire how the child was getting on and also understood that Dr. Baxter would call him up each day and let him know how the little girl progressed. He said that he and his companion were very sorry that the accident had occurred and he pleaded guilty on the first two charges.

William Armstrong, who was in the car with Hickey, bore out Hickey's statements and evidence.

The magistrate said that he had no other course than to dismiss the charge of not returning to give assistance and remarked that the action of the boys after the accident had occurred was not deserving of censure at all. In view of the many complaints as to infringements of the motor vehicle act, especially on the Marsh and Loch Lomond roads and as an example to others inclined to indulge in speeding he imposed for each of the first two charges a fine of $50 and costs.

Alexander Crawford, the complainant, conducted the case for the prosecution and Francis Kerr appeared for the boys.

CONTINUITY OF MACKENZIE KING'S CAREER SO MARKED AS TO LOOK LIKE DESTINY

and difficulties encountered in individual establishments.

A Broad Training.

Mr. King's vision is not bounded by urban industrialism, nor by economic even in their broadest aspects. He is interested in all phases of the state, and even more so, in all the people who make up the state. As a cabinet minister Mr. King had to deal not only with the affairs of his own department, but under our constitutional system, where matters of front-rank importance from all departments are laid before the cabinet for its collective judgment he gained an insight into the complexity of modern government and received his training in that broader statesmanship called for in his new post.

His First Fight.

Mr. King is a fighter. In 1908, when he ran for parliament, he was a prude to entering the government, he did not choose a safe seat, as prospective or actual cabinet ministers sometimes do, but ran in the riding of North Waterloo, which in 1904 had returned a Conservative, the late Joseph Seagram, by a majority of 300. Mr. King, however, had been born in Berlin, (Kitchener), and he was determined to stake his fortune on the opinion of the people who had known him best.

His friends at Ottawa tried to dissuade him from the attempt. They pointed out that although Mr. Seagram himself was not running for re-election, his influence, a most powerful one, would all be for the Conservative candidate, and against the young aspirant for his seat. It looked, in fact, to be courting the extinction of his political ambitions, at their birth, to go into Waterloo. To his friends, who talked this way, he replied that he was prepared to trust the people because the greatest of all forces was the force of ideas. He decided Sir Wilfrid Laurier's offer to find him another constituency, and persisted in resting his hopes on the winning power of ideas.

It was with that faith he entered into a spectacular contest. The result was a decisive victory for the young Liberal, only thirty-four years of age.

As far as drama goes, this initial election of 1908 was the most exciting event in Mackenzie King's career, until the lesser drama of this past month, when before the eyes, not only of a convention, but of a nation, he was elected leader of the Liberal party of Canada.
