

FOR WOMEN

Formation Of An Organization

What Women Should Know About Starting a Political Society—Duties of Officers.

Wherever it is considered desirable for the women of the district to form a political association or society the first step to be taken is the sending out of notices to the persons who the organizers believe will be likely candidates for membership. On this preliminary notice should be set forth in very brief form the objects of the association and the place and date of the proposed meeting, and they should be signed by the persons (not more than three) who are the organizers of the plan.

At the meeting thus called the first thing to be done is to nominate a temporary chairman or a chairman of the meeting. The office is generally filled by the person who called the meeting. She in turn may call upon some other member present to act as secretary of the meeting and to record the minutes or proceedings of the meeting. If some other than the originator acts as chairman, then after calling the meeting to order with the words, "This meeting will now come to order," the chairman will call upon the convenor of the meeting to explain the objects for which the members are assembled. She will conclude her address by asking any of those present to state their views on the plan she has proposed or to ask further questions. She may, however, if she wants to be more formal, present a motion before the meeting and have discussion centre around the motion. The informal method will probably answer best at the first meeting.

Putting the Motion.

After all who have desired to air their views have done so as briefly and as tersely as possible, the motion will be put to the meeting (and it is best to have these motions framed beforehand and written out clearly in triplicate) as to whether or not the society or association shall be formed. If, as is possible, the motion is carried, a committee should be then ad hoc nominated by the chairman after consultation if desired with the other convenors to draft a constitution for the new society and set a date for the next meeting.

When this meeting assembles, the chairman and secretary who were chosen at the last meeting remain in charge. Having called the meeting to order, the chairman will ask for a report of the committee whose duty it was to draft the constitution, and this will be read and discussed clause by clause. Discussion may conveniently follow the reading of each clause, and each clause thereafter may be adopted either intact or with such amendments as are approved by the majority. When every clause has been read and approved, then the chairman shall put the motion that the whole constitution be adopted as read and amended.

The next business is the recording of the names of those who desire to become members. It is customary to elect all present at the meeting en bloc as members.

Nominating Officers

The next business is the nomination of officers. The constitution will set forth what officers are to be elected. If the meeting is a small one, nominations can be made from the floor of the room. If there are many members present it may be desirable for the chairman to name a nominating committee, who will retire from the room and after consid-

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR GIRL.

By HELEN ROWLAND
(Copyright, 1929, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

This the dangerous time of year, when a man's commonsense begins "missing" and his imagination runs "on high."

When the sound of the sea waves and all the music of the spheres are drowned in whispered "sweet nothings."

When a girl is so apt to mistake the moonlight in a man's eyes for the love-light.

When the cynic gives up inventing theories about love and begins to acquire a working knowledge of the tender passion.

When the shallowest of a man's love, the more it bubbles over into eloquence and demonstration.

When marriage ceases to look like a lottery, a trap, a habit, or a prelude to alimony—and begins to look like a beautiful vision.

When a permanent wave is more to be desired than great riches, and a blush on the cheek is worth two in the vanity-case.

When the summer girl discovers what the psychologist meant, when he said that "a kiss is a material crystallization of an ethereal emotion—a physiological demonstration of a psychological condition"—and all that!

When a fat man can find plenty of dancing partners.

When the average man's heart changes its tenant almost as often as a room in a transient hotel.

When the platoon brigade see a lot of things through the dropped stitches in their knitting; and pink sashy and blue wool are not the only kind of "yarns" in which they revel.

When flirtation becomes a duel, in which you cross lies, signs and eyes—and the coolest heart wins.

When a perfectly contented husband and wife sit together in the moonlight and wonder why they ever thought marriage was thrilling.

When the speediest ship on the ocean is a yachting courtship!

When the matter will return and present their "date" of officers. If preferred, and it is often the most wise course, the nominations may be postponed until the next meeting. If, however, it is decided to proceed with them at once, two courses are open. Either the names recommended by the committee, after being read out (and, if possible, it is desirable that they also be posted in full view of the audience by writing them upon a blackboard or in some similar way,) may be adopted as a whole and the recommendations of the nomination committee may in this way be endorsed, or the nominations may be taken one by one and voted upon, with the privilege of every member in the room of submitting an alternative name for any office.

In cases where more names are put in nomination than there are offices, the voting shall be by ballot if called for, or by a show of hands if this method is preferred. In the latter case, the chairman nominates two or more tellers to count the uplifted hands, and their figures are accepted by the chairman, who declares the result of the meeting.

President's Duties.

The duties of the officers may be briefly enumerated as follows:—

The president acts as chairman of every meeting and sees that the business is conducted in accordance with the rules laid down in the constitution or according to parliamentary practice if there is no specific ruling on any point. The president is provided by the secretary with a slip showing the order in which the business is to come before the members and also a memorandum showing the nature of that business.

The president will not allow discussion at a meeting until there is a motion before the meeting. It is the duty of the president to see by tact and by conciliatory methods that no speaker wanders from the business under discussion and does not exceed a reasonable time limit in discussing the point at issue. A motion that the question be put is a motion that the question be put.

The president, before putting a motion or an amendment, should rise and read it clearly, and should declare whether the motion or amendment is lost, the chairman adds, "and the question is now the main motion." The chairman should take care to dispose of one motion before passing to the next business.

According to the rules of the constitution, the president may also have certain administrative duties. The decision of the chairman or president cannot be challenged except by a motion that the ruling of the chairman be overruled, and this is obviously a vote of no confidence in the chairman and will not be resorted to except in extreme circumstances, when this is done and the motion is in the affirmative it amounts practically to a demand by the society for the resignation of the chairman, although such is not necessary.

The vice-president acts for the chairman and has identical duties, save that in most societies the vice-chairman has not the full administrative powers of the president.

The chief duties of the secretary are to keep the minutes of the meetings, to advise members of the date of the payment of their dues, to summon them to meetings, and such clerical work as the office involves. The minutes of the meeting should include

CAUSE SUCH GREAT PHYSICAL WEAKNESS AND MAKE ONE EASY PREY TO A MULTITUDE OF DANGEROUS DISEASES.

Every human being is born with a certain quantity of "nerve force"—some with more than others.

Your body normally makes or generates nerve force only about so fast, and if through overwork, worry, constant nervous strain or other excessive use, you use up your nerve force faster than your body makes new nerve force, then your nerve power becomes weakened, and as a consequence your blood may become thin, pale, and watery, and you become feeble, cross, and irritable. In such a state you may not only suffer terrible tortures from a multitude of alarming symptoms, but in your greatly weakened condition you are an easy prey for the multitude of dangerous germs with which you must come in almost daily contact, and you may therefore easily contract some dangerous or even fatal disease.

In such cases you should immediately take something to revitalize your worn-out, exhausted nerves and create new nerve force. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product quickly aids in enriching the blood and thereby helps it to furnish an additional supply of new nerve force with which to revitalize and regenerate the brain and nerve cells. It also contains a product which represents the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form most nearly allied to that in the nerve and brain cells of man. Nuxated Iron may therefore be said to be both a blood and a nerve food as it furnishes strengthening organic iron to the blood and the most important element of the nerve-vital fluid to the nerves. The effect of Nuxated Iron in cases of exhausted nerve force and impoverished blood is so remarkable and surprising that it often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, "run-down" men and women in two weeks' time. In fact, the manufacturers guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. Nuxated Iron is for sale by all druggists.

EXPRESSES EXCLUSIVE STYLE

The shirred revers and collar with points extending well toward the armholes express a new note in the blouse of this dotted silk frock. The skirt, with pointed revers, is gathered at the top. Plain silk is used for the girdle, to correspond with the foundation skirt and blouse and tunic trimming. Medium size requires 4½ yards 36-inch figured, and 2 yards 36-inch plain silk, with 1½ yard lining.

No criticism favorable or unfavorable on the speeches delivered at the meetings. The minutes of the last meeting are read by the secretary at the succeeding meeting, and after the chairman has asked if there are any corrections to those minutes they are declared to be passed, and the chairman affixes his signature to them and they become part of the records of the society. The secretary will conduct the correspondence for the society, and as a rule will with the president sign orders on the treasurer for the payment of debts incurred by the society.

Treasurer's Duty.

The treasurer takes charge of the funds of the society and makes payments on the order of the president and secretary or in accordance to the rules laid down in the constitution. According to the constitution also, he should prepare annually or quarterly a financial statement. It is customary and more satisfactory to have auditors appointed to sanction this report.

Committees are of three kinds. All the members may resolve themselves into a committee of the whole in order to discuss some matter more freely than can be done in the more formal procedure of the regular meetings, or certain committees known as standing committees may be appointed for an indefinite time to discuss and report on certain sections of the work of the association, or special committees may be appointed for a definite purpose, ceasing to exist when the purpose for which they were convened or nominated has been reached.

An executive committee is a standing committee which, according to the rules of the constitution, acts with the other officers of the society in carrying on its routine business.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

YOU know the real human doctors right around in your neighborhood: the doctors made of flesh and blood just like you: the doctors with souls and hearts: those men who are responding to your call in the dead of night as readily as in the broad daylight; they are ready to tell you the good that Fletcher's Castoria has done, is doing and will do, from their experience and their love for children.

Your physician knows that Castoria is purely a child's remedy. It was sought for and discovered as a substitute for Castor-Oil in the ailments of Infants and Children.

Your physician will tell you this for he knows that preparations put on the market for adults are not adaptable for the very young and he is particularly interested in your baby.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Is Baby Well and Strong?

Your heart aches when your baby falls sick. You feel so anxious to help the little sufferer, yet so helpless because baby can't tell you where it feels bad. But, if you are wise, you know that generally baby sickness comes from a disordered stomach or bowels. You can tell easily that baby is constipated or has pain, eruptions, flatulence, diarrhoea, is restless, feverish, wakeful, fretful. Good mothers use Fletcher's Castoria, a wonderful, remedy, purely vegetable, discovered by a family doctor and used in the best families for over thirty years.

Children cry for Fletcher's Castoria. It is a comfort to babies, the mother's unfailing friend. Any Mother who has used Fletcher's Castoria will advise you to use it for your baby. Give your sick baby a dose of it and note how soon baby begins to feel better. A few doses and you will realize what a wonderful remedy Fletcher's Castoria is for babies, what a comfort it is for mothers to depend on.

Never try to relieve baby with a remedy that you would use for yourself. Don't say tomorrow, get it today.

FRENCH WOMEN ARE HOMEKEEPING

Ties of Family Very Strong—Home Life Rather Exclusive.

The homekeeping French woman is much more common than the average foreigner is apt to think after a casual visit to Paris. The impression of outdoor life is given by the most frequented cafes and the strollers on the boulevards.

The French woman loves her home. She is jealous of her privacy and opens her doors, but rarely to any of her own family. The stranger within her gates is always a stranger, however courteously treated.

The only people who know French women who know France even a part from their immediate relatives or old family friends, are their servants and their governesses. There is no hospitality as English women know it. The home life literally means the home life.

Families foregather in large numbers and they do not like to mix friends and family in the daily life. The stronger conservative element in French women inclines them to exclusiveness, no matter what their social rank. The claim of relationship is strong and they recognize it even when they grumble about it.

Little Intimacy.

When a woman marries she accepts and is accepted by her husband's family. The husband does the same thing with her family. The power of family ties is evident, in so many ways that anyone who knows France even a little must realize how difficult it is for the foreigner to get beyond a bowing acquaintance unless he or she can claim some sort of relationship. Even a distant cousin is treated with respect and addressed by the title, and there is something awe inspiring in an aunt or an uncle.

Such customs necessarily make the home a very intimate place, and as a further barrier to intimacy from the passing visitor the very arrangement of the house is such as to emphasize the dividing line between.

The saloon is never a common-

NOVELTIES.

New accessories noticed are the flower trimmed bags of suede, the red crpe pouches gathered in with Indian beads of matching color, walking sticks in ebony and colored enamel, with matching vanity cases, and tiny satin bags for the powder puff, which slip in a pocket on the inside of the new wide sleeve.

FOR MYSELF.

"I have to live with myself, and so I want to be fit for myself and know I want to be able to do as I go by. Always to look myself straight in the eye."

I don't want to stand, with the setting sun And hate myself for the things I've done."

There is no tidy litter of work and books in it. It is a place where one receives, makes music, drinks coffee after luncheon, and talks politely.

The bedroom is the place where one sews, reads, writes one's letters and does one's housekeeping books, and upon which is stamped the individuality of the inhabitant in a middle-class family.

I. O. D. E. APPROVE OF BOOK WEEK

The intention of the Canadian Authors' Association to hold a Book Week in November was endorsed at the September meeting of the I. O. D. E. National executive held in Toronto.

Miss Joan Arnold, National president, in the chair.

Miss Laing, National educational secretary, reported that the memorandum for the 1932 War Memorial Overseas scholarships had been sent out during the summer to the five eligible provinces, i. e., those provinces whose candidates did not succeed in winning the 1931 scholarships.

Miss Laing also reported favorably on the marks gained in the examinations at the end of their first year by the winners of the 1930 Canadian bursaries.

A report of the annual meeting of the Victoria League was read from Mrs. Pegler, who represented the I. O. D. E. at the meeting. There was also a report of the annual meeting of the National Council of Women, from the order's representative, Mrs. John Drummond of Calgary.

The resignation of Miss Mary L. Boller from the office of National secretary, Miss Boller having accepted an important post in the University of British Columbia, was accepted with regret.
