The buildings were originally a Jesuit college, and the property was escheated to the crown at the conquest, the order having been abolished by the Sovereign Pontid. Their occupation as barracks by Brush troops accounts for the word Jesuit being used to qualify the barracks. The Jesuits, after the resuscitation of the Order, have several times reclaimed this property, on one precedent or another, the last time during the late session of the Quebec Legislature, but always without success. The erection of legislative buildings on the site will probably prevent the renewal of a claim which they will then lose all hope of making good.

It was withering, the contemptuous manner in which he picked the Budget to pieces and denounced the Finance Minister for his shortsighted, mischievous and uncalled for it k r ng with the finances of the country. He considered that after all Mr. Cartwright's denunciation of Sir Francis Hincks, he had paid that gentleman the highest compliment that was ever given when he announced that he would come back as near the old tariff as possible. The new tariff was neither a protectionist tariff nor a tree trade policy, but a hybrid affair without any principle in it. An instance of this exhibition of BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS Auction Sale Every Evening oopular teeling is found in the manner in popular feeling is found in the manner in which the citizens of Taylorsville disposed of the case of Ed. Shields, who had been found guilty of various heinous offences and sentenced to twenty years' confinement in the penitentiary. This disposition of the case was not at all consonant with the views of the citizens, and accordingly when the Sheriff undertook to convey the prisoner from the court-room to the jail there was great excitement. The prisoner, mounted on a horse, started off between two mounted guards, but they had gone only a short distance when they found themselves pursued by a band of thirty men, all mounted and armed with shot guns. The citizens soon overtook the prisoner and after considerable skirmishing Shields and his guards were separated, and in a twinkling the body of the prisoner was suspended by the neck from a cross-beam in the nearest bridge. Hardly less exciting was the scene witnessed in the Hawesville, Ky., court room last week. On the docket stood the case of Laura Moorman vs. Eldred Bruner, an action for slander, damages laid at $20,000. Eighty witnesses were summoued, among whom was one Terrell, who, upon being called upon to testify to the truth of the defendant's allegations, was promptly faced by the two brothers of the slandered maid, one of whom undertook to shoot the defendant, while the other brother popped point blank at the witness with his fists. A general scrimmage followed, and although forty shots were fired and the court-room enveloped in a cloud of dust, nobody was hurt and the case was continued.
