

gation to promote in every way open to them the welfare and the interests of those who serve with them. The Assembly warmly commends movements now afoot in many of our industries toward the following ends:

Toward giving the workers a voice in determining the conditions under which their work is to be done, and a proper share in the control of industry;

Toward giving the workers an equitable share in the wealth jointly produced;

Toward co-operating with the State and with the workers themselves in providing insurance against unemployment, accident and illness, and in providing pensions for old age and widowed mothers;

Toward securing for workers such hours of labour as will afford leisure for self improvement and for service to their families and the community;

Toward providing in every office and factory those comforts and conveniences that will safeguard the health and brighten the lives of employees while at their work.

In the interests of efficiency, as well as of industrial peace, the Assembly would urge that such efforts be continued and extended.

The General Assembly affirms the sacredness of human personality, and would point out that such conditions of work must be
