On St. Barnabas Day the Bishop of Southampton held a solemn service of re-opening in the little Saxon church of Corhampton, in Hampshire, which has recently been repaired and reseated at the cost of about £800, collected by the vicar (Rev. H. Churton), and others during the past nine years. The work of "reparation" rather than "restoration" has been most carefully carried out under the direction of Mr. T. G. Jackson, R.A., and every feature of interest and analysis has been preserved including tiquity has been preserved, including the remains of some twelfth century decorations, which were brought to light on the walls of the chancel, and traces of two ancient consecration crosses found on the north wall of the

A dedication service was held in St. John's Church, Malone, near Belfast, on 14th June. Increasing population in the district has led to extensive enlargements and improvements being undertaken. A nave has been built, a handsome oak pulpit presented by a parishioner, choir stalls, a reredos, and Holy Table in oak have been provided, and a picturesque Old English porch has been constructed. Over the vestibule there is a gallery. A robing room has been provided for the choir. The designs were prepared by Mr. Henry Seaver, C.E., brother of the rector. The Bishop, who dedicated the nave, was met at the west door by the rector, the Rev. R. W. Seaver, B.D., and a large number of the clergy and the

OTHER PEOPLE'S EYES.

"It is almost as good as going away myself when Edith goes," said Edith's mother. "She brings home so much to me."

A listening friend, who knew that Edith had not much money to spend, looked wondering.

"Souvenirs?" she asked.

"Oh, no! Ideas and descriptions. She tells me about everything she has seen so clearly that I get a splendid glimpse of it all myself."

"I know," nodded a third mothera shut-in. "Reba is like that, too. She does not go out of town-I cannot spare her-but she never goes shopping or across the street to call that she does not have pleasant things to tell me when she comes home, till I almost feel as if I had been with her."

Is it a special gift, this making real and interesting to another the things that you have seen and heard? Perhaps it comes more naturally to some than to others, but it is something that can be cultivated if you take pains to be observing and to remember and tell what you have observed.

Many busy mothers or triends would like to cry with Mark Anthony, Lend me your ears! -not that they may say something into them, but that they may hear something inrough them; and they would also add, "Lend me your eyes, that I may see sometning through them."

A DOG WHICH SAVES LIVES.

Rags is a four-year-old dog, unkept and ill-looking, but a heroic heart beats in his snaggy breast. Kags has saved more than torty lives. His field or service is the Klondike, where he and his master have wintered for several years. The Philadelphia North American tells of two of the uogs expioits.

In the winter of 1901 a number of men belonging to the Pittsburg mining company were prospecting in Alaska. They lived in a little wooden nut, from which they went out in pairs to explore. They were away beyond any signs of civilization, and the weather was so severe that they endured a good deal of suffering.

One day two of the men, out on an expedition, were caught in a sudden and terrinc storm. They started back for camp, but the trail was rapidly covered by a dritting snow. On and on the men plodded, each falling now and again, only to be roused from the death-dearing sleep and hustled on by his companion. At last both sank, and the snow drifted over them.

The men at the camp, alarmed by the non-appearance of their comrades, started out to rescue them. Rags went along, too. Straight as an arrow he followed the trail, and before long a sharp yell told the party that their friends had been found. The two men were completely buried in the snow, and help had not come one moment too soon. This was Rags first exploit.

At another time he went out as the leader of sixteen dogs which were dragging a rescue team to relieve a party of snow-bound miners. As the the warnings which suggest the necesteam was plodding steadily along, Rags suddenly gave a cry, broke from the traces and bounded away. Think- would be healthy, happy and successing he might have found the trail, the ful, test this great food cure, 50 cents party followed, and by the time they a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, had reached him Rags had dug away Bates & Co., Toronto.

Wasting Brain and Nerve Force

Brain and nerve force is squandered n a way which would be utterly condemned in the use of money, and of what value is money as compared with nealth?

By useless fretting and worry, by overwork, and by neglecting to take proper nourishment, rest and sleep, strength and vitality are frittered away and no reserve force is left to give confidence in mind and body which is necessary to stand the attack of disease.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is valued because it actually increases the amount of nerve force in the body, overcomes the symptoms arising from exhausted nerves, and gives that strength and confidence in mind and body which is necessary to success in life.

Nervous headache, brain fag, inability to concentrate the mind, loss of sleep, irritability, nervousness and despondency are among the indications of exhausted nerve force. These are sity of such help as is best supplied by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. If you
