Lo, the Poor Millionaire.

(Boston Herald.) Bernard Shaw has been looking into the case of the poor millionaire, and he finds it really pathetic. Looking over the advertisements of the manufacturers, he finds that everything is produced for the millions but nothing for the millionaire. You may search the world over in vain, he says, for the market where the $250 boots, tne special dear line of hats, the cloth-of-gold bleycling suit and the Cleopatra claret, four pearls to the bottle, can be purchased at wholesale. That there are societies for the relief of all sorts of comparatively happy people, "from discharged prisoners in the first rapture of their regained liberty to children revelling in the luxury of unlimited appetite, but no hand is stretched out to the millionaire except to beg." While he can have the best in the market, he is no better off than the professor of a modest $25,000 or so a year. The only one thing that he can order on a scale of special expensive pomp is his fune-ral. ments of the manufacturers, he finds that

Remarkable Cure.

New Yorkers who have been advised by their physicians to seek outdoor work in the country and who lack either the means or opportunity for making the lifegiving change need not despair. Wonderful outdoor cures are being worked right in the heart of the city. A most right in the heart of the city. A most remarkable case is that of a young clergyman who for the last eight or nine months has been lecturing on a sight-seeing coach. Last summer he went to Oxford College, England, for a special course of study, during which his health gave way, and he returned to America with funds exhausted and the verdict of nervous prostration and tuberculosis of nervous prostration and tuberculosis hanging over his head. His New York physician told him to seek outdoor emoyment at once, and the young man eured his present position as lecturer sightseers. At first his voice almost o sightseers. At first his voice almost ailed him, but as he became accustomed to talking in the cold air the cough stor ped and his tones became clear and firm. All winter long he made his daily trip. Now "the spot" on his lung has faded, and in addition to his weekday work in New York he goes to Trenton, N. J., each Sunday to conduct mission services. He intends to remain on the coach until fall, by which time his physician promise that the cure will be complete.

Red Hairs Fewest.

Fair haired persons have a greater number of hairs upon their heads than those with darker thatch, but a red headed person has the fewest hairs of all, since it is estimated that not m than thirty thousand hairs are to be found upon the average sized head. If one has black hair the number is apt to run up to one hundred thousand, while a fair haired person boasts of half as many again.

This difference in number is due to the fact that blonde hair is finer in quality than the dark fint, and more are required to cover the scalp, while a deep red hair is three times as great in dia-meter as black, and, besides being more vigorous on that account, is more easily kept in order.

Commercial Travellers Not New.

It has generally been supposed that the commercial traveller is a product of the commercial traveller is a product of our own busy day, but as early as 1757 a Sheffield cutlery manufacturer conceived the idea of sending to the Con-tinent glib talkers to convince the mer-chants that the English made cutlery was superior to that of local manufacturers, and so marked was his success that it was not long before the same idea was put into practice in other lines. As early as 1765 the term bagman had become common, the word being de-fined in Murray's dictionary of that year, the example being quoted from Goldsmith.

The title "commercial traveller" is the only modern part of the idea, the ancient bagman lasting until the improvements in travel caused the term to be

Opal Glasses.

A new use has been found for the min eral called fluorspar in the manufacture of a very beautiful kind of glass. The substance is added to the quartz mixture, and produces an exquisite play of opales cent color. The opalescence, often very brilliant of ancient articles of glass, such as those which have been dug up on the Island of Cyprus, is due not to any chem ical ingredient, but to a decay of the material, which, owing to this cause, has assumed a laminated structure, being split up into a series of layers. These layers break up the light rays and in this way give prismatic effects.

A few years ago a well-known amateur

A few years ago a well-known amateu in such matters, greatly admiring the opalescent effect in antique glass, set out to imitate it, and after many experinents produced what is now called Fav rile ware. This ware has a gorgeous iridescence, its hues being sometimes metallic and sometimes counterfeiting mother of pearl. No two pieces are alike in color, each one being made separ-ately, and the glass is so costly that one has to pay $10 for a single tumbler.

New Drink Cure.

The authorities in Norway have discoyered a novel way of curing drunkenness. The "patient" is placed under lock and key and his nourshment consists in great part of bread soaked in port wine.
