

FINE TAFFIES!

There's one thing you may be sure of, our taffies will not hurt your little boy or girl. The kind we have is pure sugar made, with fine flavors. A number of them have nuts in, and the combination is delicious.

15c. and 20c. a Pound.
Crawford's Butter
 Scotch,
 25c. a pound.
Peppermint Chocolates
 25c. a pound.
Graham Chocolates
 15c. and 25c. a pound.
Maple Cream
 25c. a pound.
Peanut Brittle
 20c. a pound.
Molasses Taffies
 wrapped, 15c. a lb.

H. Malcolmson

Secure Your Watch

with a charm that is strong and has some pretensions to beauty. Chains, like other things, change in style and what was correct last year may not be just right this. Link by Link the designers and makers have added something new and beautiful to the rich and artistic effects of previous seasons and the line of now shown here may be considered as truly representative of all that is good in such things.

MEN'S WATCH CHAINS

E. J. MacIntyre
 Leading Jeweler and Optician,
 King Street.

Beauty's Refuge

The finer or more delicate your complexion, the more it will suffer from the weather for several months now. Just a little lack or a little excess of moisture in the atmosphere and chapping will result. Those who care little for beauty at least care for comfort and there is comfort in a smooth soft skin. Our

Almond Cream Of Witch Hazel

Keeps the skin like velvet. We make it. It is harmless as dew. We do not believe the skin can possibly chap where it is used properly, or stay chapped long after it is applied. Price

25 Cents

W. W. Turner,
 28 Rutherford Block
 Phone 221

FOR SALE

Two-story frame house with lot in good location, double parlors, dining room, kitchen, pantry, three bedrooms, three closets, store rooms, summer kitchen, city water in house. We have for sale cheap a good second-hand "Art Garland" base-burner coal stove.

DUNN & MERRITT,
 Phone 225, Box 52, Fifth St.

MORLEY & CO., Leading Merchant Tailors

DR. A. W. THORNTON

D. D. S. Toronto University.
 Office—First Floor East of Standard Bank
 Telephone Office 164.
 Residence 283.

PROBABILITIES.

Special to The Planet.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—10 a. m.—Moderate south and east winds, fair and mild. Friday, mostly fair and mild.

The following figures were registered today at seven a. m. at Turner's weather bureau:

Thermometer 36.
 Highest yesterday 55.
 Lowest yesterday 34.
 Direction of wind, south.

TO-NIGHT.

The Hawthorne Musical Club at the Grand.
 Chatham Encampment, No. 10, I. O. O. F. Oddfellows' Temple, 8 o'clock.

Local Briefs

Guy Bros. left this morning for Ridgeway.

F. C. Netherington, of Blenheim, was a visitor in the city yesterday.
 J. H. Drew, of Merlin, was registered at the C. P. R. yesterday.

Bruce R. Dick and J. W. Aitken are in Blenheim to-day on business.

A. H. Patterson offers his 200 acre farm in Harwich, for rent.

P. C. Dezelia and Detective McGregor are out enjoying a day's shooting to-day.

Chatham Encampment No. 10, I. O. O. F., will hold their regular meeting to-night.

Wanted.—100 men and women to take Robert's course of Physical Culture. See advt. on another page.

Under the heading "Theatrical" in this paper you will find the program for the Lyceum Course to-night.

A social will be held at the residence of Mrs. Bradshaw, Richmond street, to-night, under the direction of the Rebekahs.

Lost, about ten days ago, a sky terrier pup. Finder will be rewarded by leaving at Alex. Edmunds, at O'Brien's cigar factory.

A number of merchants on King street are complaining about loaders standing in their doorways and expediting tobacco juice all over.

Albert Purser, for many years a resident of Harwich, and now largely interested in the manufacture of carriage sundries in Pontiac, Mich., is taking his family to the States. They will move to-day.

John Milne, of the 8th concession, Chatham Township, is to-day selling by auction all of his farm stock and implements. He intends to move into the city. McCog & Harrington were the auctioneers.

"I think the water rates should come down," said a well known citizen and merchant this morning. "The waterworks was put up for the benefit of the people, and they are the ones who should reap a direct benefit by getting the lowest possible rate."

The Maple Leaf Pleasure Club will hold a grand masquerade ball and basket assembly on Thursday evening, Nov. 27th, by request. There will be three prizes given; the prizes will be given to the winners in the exhibition in E. J. MacIntyre's window. Note—Owing to the A. O. F. ball being held to-night there will be no assembly of the club this week, but don't forget the masquerade on the 27th.

The horse and buggy belonging to Mr. Papst, of Dresden, which was missing Tuesday night, was located yesterday afternoon by Officer Henry Darr. He telephoned the Chief and the latter went up. Mr. Papst, Taylor avenue, said that the horse had been tied to the tree when he got up in the morning. At noon he put it in his barn and fed it. The police are looking for the man who tied the horse up on Taylor avenue. They want him for cruelty to animals.

Fireman Harry A. Johnson and Miss Luvina Irene Vickery were united in marriage last evening at the William Street Baptist church parsonage. The Rev. J. J. Rose performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Judson and Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Brown were present. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Judson are sisters of the bride. The young couple left on a wedding trip east via the 8:05 G. T. R. express. On their return they will take up their residence on Barthe street in the house recently occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur O. Oldershaw.

WEDNESDAY

Our window will be trimmed for the balance of this week with the finest line of

NOVELTIES

in the land for Ladies' Wear.
 HAVE A LOOK.

Mrs. J. E. Weldon, King St.

Mrs. J. V. Baworth, Lorne avenue is quite ill.

Joseph Tilt, of London, was in the city yesterday.

A. W. Runney, of Toronto, was in the city yesterday.

Joseph Tait, of London, was in the city yesterday.

The moon feast of the I. O. O. F. was postponed from last night till next Wednesday.

Mrs. John Kenny, Taylor avenue, has returned from a brief visit to friends at Mitchell's Bay.

The date of the social to be held at Mrs. R. J. Gardiner's has been changed from Dec. 1st to Dec. 2nd.

Miss Grace Martin, Dover street, entertained a few of her friends to an oyster supper on Tuesday night.

Miss Jennie Chamberlin, who has been visiting her sister on Lansdowne avenue, returned this afternoon to Niagara Falls.

H. Myers, Tibbury, and H. Carrier, of the Lighthouse, came up the river yesterday in Mr. Myers' gasoline launch.

The Ancient Order of Foresters had a successful dance in the I. O. O. F. auditorium last night. Lorrman's orchestra furnished the music.

A car of machinery and one of spokes have arrived for the Chapin Wheel Works. A little bending was done at the factory yesterday.

The Hadley Lumber Company are making a walnut dispensing table to be used in the Dresden branch of the A. I. McGill Company, druggists.

The new drug store which is being opened up in the east end of King street, and which will be managed by A. I. McGill & Co., will be ready for business in a short time. The Hadley Company are now engaged in installing the inside fixtures.

A parlor social will be given by Mrs. J. M. Pike, Mrs. B. J. Gardiner, and Mrs. R. V. Bray, on behalf of the Ladies' Guild of Christ church, at the residence of Mrs. R. J. Gardiner, on Wellington street, on Tuesday evening, December 2nd. Good program, silver collection. Wks

James Keely has laid a charge of malicious damage to property against Chas. Culvany. Keely lives on Broad street near O. B. Hulin's and he alleges that Culvany and his wife come out every night and play a serenade on his (Keely's) dwelling, using bottles and bricks as a means of producing music. The musical rattle of the bottles and bricks on the roof and clap-boards has scared the inmates of the house as a means of producing music. The musical rattle of the bottles and bricks on the roof and clap-boards has scared the inmates of the house as a means of producing music. The musical rattle of the bottles and bricks on the roof and clap-boards has scared the inmates of the house as a means of producing music.

CHILDREN'S BONFIRE

The home of Matthew Polson, William street, was the scene of what might have been a disastrous blaze, evening. The children piled powder in the centre of the living room and set fire to them. The blaze attracted Mrs. Polson's attention, and she hurried the children from danger. Milton Pritchard happened to be passing. He ran in and found the children's bon-fire blazing at a great rate. The young man succeeded in extinguishing the fire, but the carpet was ruined and the room considerably damaged.

VITRIFIED BRICK

City Engineer Jones is getting in the race to add industries to Chatham. He says that the shale lying below Chatham is the same as the Hamilton shale from which vitrified bricks are being made at Massillon, Ohio. These are the same bricks which the city is using for paving the streets. Around Chatham this shale is 65 feet deep, but at Florence it comes near the surface of the ground. Mr. Jones has interested Daniel Jordan, Sr., in the project and he is going to get some of the shale and see what he can do with it. If a vitrified paving brick industry were started it would mean a great thing for this city.

GOOD CONCERT

Last night Court Enery, No. 799, I. O. F., Chatham Centre, gave a very successful, pleasing and entertaining concert. Every piece put on was well rendered and met with hearty applause. The following took part: Darrell, Maudslayi, G. Wanda; Wrigley; Miss Forsyth; G. Wanda; Harry Horstead; Dr. DeCov; W. T. Burrows. A splendid address on Independent Forestry was given by ex-Mayor Smith, of Chatham. Bro. Smith handled the subject from a financial, social and fraternal standpoint, and it is needless to say that the Court Enery was the winner, as at the close of the very successful concert several applications for membership were handed in. The Rev. Mr. Neely also gave a very pleasing address, which was well received. Bro. R. A. Harrington occupied the chair to the satisfaction of every one.

THE DEFENCE OF LONDON.

FORTIFICATIONS BEING RAPIDLY CONSTRUCTED.

Powerful Batteries Mounted on Elevations Commanding Principal Routes—Buildings For Mobilizing Centre.

London, Nov. 20.—Efforts of a far-reaching character have been set on foot to fortify the metropolis against a possible attack in case of war, from which it has hitherto been quite inadequately protected. An announcement to the effect that the extensive buildings have been completed at Wokingham, Surrey, eleven miles south of London, for use as a mobilizing centre in the scheme for the defence of London, reveals for the first time the existence of such important War Office operations. It is stated that when Lord Roberts took over his post as Commander-in-Chief of the British army he personally investigated the defences of London, and found them to be very imperfect. Since then powerful batteries have been mounted on elevations commanding the principal roads between London and the south coast. New fortifications are also being rapidly constructed along the banks of the Thames.

BANQUET AT OTTAWA.

London Chamber of Commerce Delegates the Guests.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—The delegates from the London Chamber of Commerce arrived from Montreal yesterday. They were entertained to luncheon at the Rideau Club by Hon. Clifford Sifton, and spent the afternoon in sightseeing. Last evening a banquet in their honor was given at the Russell House by the Ottawa Board of Trade. Mr. John Coates, the President of that body, occupied the chair, and among those present were—Hon. William Paterson, Minister of Customs, and Hon. R. W. Scott, Secretary of State. The usual loyal toasts were enthusiastically honored, after which Mr. C. F. Henderson proposed the toast of "Canada and its capital," to which replies were made by Hon. R. W. Scott, Hon. Wm. Paterson and Mayor Cook. Mr. Scott dwelt upon the extent of Canada and the variety of its natural resources, and alluded to it as the home of a free, intelligent and loyal people, who were likely to remain so. There was no thought of annexation, unless it was of annexing the northern tier of States in the republic to the south. (Laughter and applause.)

He spoke of the American invasion of the Canadian west, which, however, was of a character that was welcomed here. Before the close of the present century he expected that Canada would have a population of fifty million, and would be the strong right arm of the British Empire. Hon. Wm. Paterson said every Canadian now felt that he was a citizen of one of the greatest countries in the world. He was glad to meet the gentlemen from England, and trusted that their visit to Canada would be a pleasant one.

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

James Keely has laid a charge of malicious damage to property against Chas. Culvany. Keely lives on Broad street near O. B. Hulin's and he alleges that Culvany and his wife come out every night and play a serenade on his (Keely's) dwelling, using bottles and bricks as a means of producing music. The musical rattle of the bottles and bricks on the roof and clap-boards has scared the inmates of the house as a means of producing music. The musical rattle of the bottles and bricks on the roof and clap-boards has scared the inmates of the house as a means of producing music.

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

James Keely has laid a charge of malicious damage to property against Chas. Culvany. Keely lives on Broad street near O. B. Hulin's and he alleges that Culvany and his wife come out every night and play a serenade on his (Keely's) dwelling, using bottles and bricks as a means of producing music. The musical rattle of the bottles and bricks on the roof and clap-boards has scared the inmates of the house as a means of producing music. The musical rattle of the bottles and bricks on the roof and clap-boards has scared the inmates of the house as a means of producing music.

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

The Chairman proposed "the guests from the motherland," which was acknowledged by Sir Vincent Barrington, Mr. John Hume, and Mr. Kendrick Murray. Sir Vincent Barrington said he had found an undercurrent of complaint that Englishmen did not that knowledge of Canada which they ought to have. Some allowance, however, must be made for their education, as Englishmen had been accustomed to pictures of Canadians robed in furs, in England to-day sympathy and admiration for Canada was great and universal. The desire to help Canada was not the possession of any particular party or sect in England. As to meeting Canadian wishes with respect to a preference, there were great difficulties in the way. There was the strong free trade sentiment in Britain, and also the feeling that if the mother country gave a preference to her colonies it would be liable to forfeit the advantage of the most-favored nation clause with other countries. With respect to improved steamship service, it was only fair that British having given subsidies towards steamship communication with the United States, should deal equally well with her loyal colonies. Sir Vincent spoke of the investment of British capital in foreign countries, and expressed the opinion that if investments had been made in the colonies they would have turned out equally well. The speaker strongly endorsed emigration from London to Canada, and warmly advocated carrying on a strong immigration policy in Ireland. Canada gloried in its system of government and the impartial administration of justice. These were things to cling to most firmly. To connect with Britain should be a string of roses and not fetters of iron. (Loud cheers.)

SPECIAL SALE

OF

Ladies' Jackets.

—AT THE—

Gordon Store

Owing to the mild weather and to reduce our large stock we will sell FIFTY LADIES' COATS for each $4.98

Black and Fawn, 27 inch, Silk Lined throughout, the Latest Half Fitting back, New Sleeves and Cuffs. Also

GREY FRIEZE and BEAVER COATS, 36 and 38 inch at the Same Price.

OUR LOSS IS YOUR GAIN.

William Gordon.

Standard Fashion Sheets and Catalogues. Standard Fashion Designer, 10c

THE MARKET REPORTS.

Grain Still Adv