DISASTROUS FIRE AT ONTARIO HOUSE.

West Wing of Provincial Building Complete Wreck—Loss $700,000.

Whitney and Cabinet as a Salvage Corps—Many Documents Lost in the Fire.

Estimated damage to building $325,000.
Estimated damage to Provincial library 250,000.
Estimated damage to furniture and other contents 120,000.
Insurance on building 750,000.
Insurance on contents, nothing.
Supposed origin of fire, roofers' charcoal store.

Toronto, Sept. 2.—West wing of the Parliament buildings on fire! Such was the message telephoned into the central fire station from the Attorney-General's Department shortly before 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

It was twenty-two minutes later when the fire brigade made its appearance in Queen's Park.

Meantime the flames had burst through the roof, swept along the supporting timbers and enveloped the upper corridors. Volumes of smoke clogged the building and the top story had fallen.

OUTBREAK WAS SUDDEN.
The conflagration seemed to break out in a moment. The cabinet had gone into session in the council chamber at the eastern end. Many of the employees were enjoying the luncheon hour. Parties of tourists were strolling leisurely along the corridors. With a startlingly sudden intonation the glass-covered ceiling of the western end of the main building gave way and crashed with a beam of burning timber to the ground floor, three stories below.

MR. ROGERS' WRIST BROKEN.
Through the aperture the roof glowed livid in fire, the blaze burst out in wild flames, and the building was instantly in an uproar. With commendable promptness Inspector Joseph E. Rogers threw the interior hydrant open, breaking his right wrist in so doing, and Messrs. C. Jennings and J. H. Bradshaw had the hose playing almost immediately.

Meantime the cabinet had hastily risen and the Ministers hurried to the scene. Directions were given and messengers flew hither and thither, carrying valuable provincial papers to places of safety.

THE PREMIER TAKES CHARGE.
Under the personal command of Sir James Whitney, who stood at the head of the stairs, the parliamentary fire department commenced operations, throwing four streams of water. The Premier had energetic lieutenants in Mr. A. W. Campbell, Deputy Minister of Public Works, and Architect Heakes. While his ministerial chief was directing the fire-fighting, Hon. W. J. Hanna, the Provincial Secretary, organized the staff into a salvage corps to save papers and documents in various departments. The Minister assigned to the officers of each branch the responsibility for the papers in their charge, with the result that the important documents were speedily deposited to places of safety.

WORKED LIKE FIRE-FIGHTERS.

The Ministers worked and sweated like firemen. Sir James, in the drenching water, his begrimed face sheltered by upturned collar, and his hat broken in by falling debris, was in the thick of the fire-fighting. Hon. Mr. Hanna, equipped in an old coat and cap and heavy gloves, was assisting the men who were removing property. Hon. Mr. Foy and Mr. Chas. Chase worked near Sir James, the latter with his coat off and the perspiration dripping from his face. Ministers, Deputy Ministers and clerks crowded as volunteer fire-fighters.

Messrs. J. L. Connell, Gordon Southam and Hope Gibson, Hamilton members of the Zingari cricket team, playing on the University grounds, assisted in getting out three lines of hose inside the building.

It would be about 1.30 o'clock, with a roar, the whole centre of the wing crashed down, wiping out a considerable portion of the library, one of the largest and most important in Canada. The city fire department were now on the scene and taking charge, and his friends urged the Premier to desist.

Papers, books, documents and furniture were not clogging the smoke-bedecked and watery corridors, and were being carried out as rapidly as possible. Burning debris seemed to be falling everywhere, and men were engaged in removing the paintings and pictures from the main corridor.

While the firemen were concentrating their energies on the north end of the wing, Hon. Mr. Foy discovered that flames were spreading over the roof of the Chamber, and there was danger of the Legislative halls going. Firemen and civil servants, headed by the Attorney-General himself, with axes, hurried to cut off the connection.

LOSS OF PROVINCIAL LIBRARY.
Unfortunately, in the meantime the fire had eaten its way down to the Provincial Library, and while a hundred workmen were at work preparing the foundation of the new fireproof wing where the literary treasures of Ontario were to be housed, 200,000 volumes, to say nothing of a multitude of records which cannot be replaced, were going up in flames or being water-soaked. The tremendous draft created drove half-burned pages afloat over the park, and the Provincial Treasurer almost pathetically drew the attention of a newspaper man to a scorched page of a pamphlet dated 1851, which he had picked up.

By half-past 1 the fire had spread to the north and enveloped the insurance department—it was almost ironic in view of the fact that not a cent of insurance is carried on the contents of the building—and as it was impossible to approach the flames directly, efforts had to be concentrated on their restriction to the upper floors of the west wing.

REVISED LAWS LOST.
Two years' work of the Statute Revision Committee may be lost. Although the Law Clerk's office was not gutted, yet a mass of debris fell through the ceiling, and the whole place was water-soaked, destroying, it is feared, the work of the committee of Judges which has been engaged in revising the law of Ontario.

Similarly the records of births, deaths, and marriages in the Registrar's Department suffered, but it is hoped that a large majority of these valuable documents will still be decipherable.

One of the chief sufferers by the fire is Mr. H. Sydere, Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, who lost his entire Parliamentary library, consisting of some 1,500 volumes. The books included records of debates and compilations of Parliamentary statistics which cannot be replaced. So far as the Province itself is concerned, but few documents of value were lost in Mr. Sydere's department, the record of the last general election having been burnt in June last, according to the provisions of the statute.

District Chief Smedley, of the Yonge Street Fire Hall, was in all probability the first member of the City Fire Brigade upon the scene. Headquarters, acting upon the still alarm which was turned in, 'phoned the Yonge street hall, and Chief Smedley immediately proceeded to the Parliament buildings. On his arrival he appreciated the situation and turned in a general alarm.

THE DEPARTMENTS DESTROYED.
The departments practically destroyed include the Provincial Library, the offices of the health department, the labor department, Hon. J. S. Hendrie's offices, Hon. Adam Beck's offices, the Registrar-General's offices, the offices of Lieut.-Col. Delamere, Assistant Clerk of the House, and Sergeant-at-Arms Clackmeyer's private offices. Those badly damaged include the law officers' department; the Ontario Railway Board's offices; the offices of Mr. A. H. Sydere, Clerk of the House; the King's Printer's department; the offices of the Archivist; the offices of Hon. A. G. MacKay, leader of the Opposition; the offices of the Provincial Geologist; the Parliamentary committee rooms, and the members' reading room.

The official Provincial statement of expenditure shows that the total cost of the new Parliament and departmental buildings was $1,282,679.

Carried high by the wind, a cloud of burning chips and shavings endangered the surrounding property, but fortunately none secured a hold. At a quarter to 2 a hose was rushed through the main entrance and the stream turned upwards against the heated mass, while holes were being bocked through the flooring to enable the water to flow back into the already half-flooded basement.

The fire was completely under control by 3 o'clock, but the brigade remained on duty for several hours thereafter, while an engine and several men remained till this morning. No chances were taken as it was feared that some smouldering embers might have been carried to other parts of the building.

Many were the enquiries regarding the fire and the Premier received a number of messages expressive of regret at the loss the Province had sustained.

ORIGIN OF THE FIRE.
The fire broke out apparently just in the conjunction of the roofs of the west wing and the main building. It originated in what may be understood as the attic of the building, where a perfect maze of timbers cross and recross one another, and interlaced with which were numerous wires connected with the electrical equipment of the building.

At first it was thought that the conflagration originated in a short-circuiting of one of the service wires, but it is only a few months ago that the whole system was overhauled, on the advice of the Fire Underwriters' Association, and the most approved methods of wiring installed, at a cost of something like $10,000. Inquiry would seem to point to an entirely different cause for the origin of the fire.

For some time past employees of the Matthews Roofing Company have been engaged in repairing the roof of the west wing, and in carrying out their work, have been utilizing a small charcoal stove for the purpose of heating their tools. It is thought that a spark blown from the stove, while the workmen were at lunch, while the matter was being investigated, the matter was placed before the Cabinet yesterday afternoon, and there will be a thorough investigation made by the officers of the Attorney-General's Department.

FIRE INSURANCE.
The insurance on the building is apportioned among the following companies: The Aetna, Alliance, Anglo-American, Atlas, British American, Caledonia, Commercial Union, Connecticut, Equity, German-American, Gore, Liverpool, Union, Fire, Guardian, Hartford, Home, Law Union & Crown, Liverpool, London & Globe, London Assurance Corporation, London & Lancashire, London Mutual, Manitoba, McIntyre, Merchants, Montreal, Canada Fire, New York Underwriters, North America, North British & Mercantile, Northern, Norwich, Ottawa, Phoenix Assurance, Phoenix of Brooklyn, Queen City, Queen Fire, Richmond & Drummond, Rochester, German, Royal, Scottish Union, Sovereign, Standard Mutual, Sun, Union, Waterloo Mutual, Western, York Mutual and York-shire.

Hon. A. J. Matheson, the Provincial Treasurer, told a reporter that the total insurance amounted to $750,000, it being apportioned among the companies named in amounts ranging from $4,000 to $25,000.

It may seem curious that the contents of the building were not covered by insurance. The facts of the case are that the Government drew up their own schedule of insurance and form of policy based upon a premium of one per cent. for a period of three years, or one-third of one per cent. per year, for the building and fixtures only.

CABINET MEETS.
Immediately after it was assured that the conflagration was under control Sir James Whitney issued a hurried call for a meeting of the Cabinet. All the ministers were in attendance, with the exception of Hon. Frank Cochrane, who was in Hamilton, and the Hon. I. B. Lucas, and many of them arrived still bearing signs in the shape of smoke and grime of the personal part they had played in the efforts to subdue the flames. At the conclusion of the gathering Sir James in a statement to the press said that the Cabinet was actually in session when the alarm was raised that the opposite wing of the building was on fire. Provincial Detective Inspector Rogers and Mr. Charles Ritchie, N. C., on leaving the Attorney-General's Department had seen the glass roof of the upper corridor fall with a crash, followed by an outpouring of flames and smoke, as already related. Detective Rogers informed the Ministers, and the Cabinet resolved itself into an amateur brigade of fire-fighters. "It is too soon for me to make any statement," said Sir James, "as to the cause of the fire, the man in the main in which it was dealt with, I believe some cricketers noticed the fire break through the roof and ran over from the university grounds to raise the alarm. In the meantime it had been noticed by several others in the buildings."

"We understand, Sir James, that there was considerable delay in the arrival of the city fire brigade after the first alarm was telephoned into headquarters."

"I can say nothing about that at present. Everybody is excited now and it is impossible to say anything."

"No time will be lost in taking whatever steps may be decided upon to make good the loss, and it may be that the question of the entire roofing of the building will have to be considered."

Some time ago the Hon. Col. Hendrie suggested to the Government that, in view of the danger from fire, the entire roof of the building should be reconstructed, and in view of the need of further office accommodation, another story added. The estimated expenditure was then placed at $200,000, and the Government hesitated upon embarking on it. Subsequently it was decided that the erection of an entirely new wing would be the better course to follow.

The young ladies in charge of the parliamentary telephone switchboard, Misses Gott and Wahnsley, stayed pluckily at their posts throughout all the uproar and excitement, answering calls and making connections with unbroken promptness.

Thousands of people visited Queen's Park yesterday afternoon and evening to view the ruined buildings, and in order to avoid accidents from falling debris, the whole west wing was roped off and guarded by a squad of six city constables all night. Four streams of water were poured constantly on the smouldering remains of the library, while the interior of the building was guarded by Provincial Detectives Greer and Miller, with a staff of a dozen watchmen.

HENDRIE CASE.
Police Incline to Think He Was Murdered.

Can Find No Instrument With Which He Could Have Suicided.

Sarnia, Sept. 1.—Search how they will, Provincial Detective Sarvis and the police of Sarnia cannot find the instrument that caused the death of William Hendrie in a lone room at Wees Beach Hotel on Monday evening, where he was found with his jugular vein severed.

The deepest of mystery surrounds the complicated and sad affair. Many are of the opinion that it will add one more case to Canada's chapter of mysteries. That the man's jugular was cut, that it was done while many people were in the close vicinity, that he died from loss of blood as a result, are facts which no one denies. Who committed the deed is the question?

The suicide theory is not considered at all. The police, with full play to the belief of the police.

True, some of the relatives of the deceased are slightly inclined to think that he did commit suicide. But they are ready and hopeful that the police will be able to convince them otherwise.

The family of the dead man state emphatically that they are sure that he did not take his own life, yet his many friends that he made in Sarnia during his some 25 years' residence there, are inclined to the suicide theory.

"I don't believe, in fact, I am sure that Hendrie did not commit suicide," said a friend of the dead man. "He was not of that disposition. He was a man that who was taken with a slight pain of any kind he would call a couple of doctors for fear that he was going to die."

Every inch of the basement of the hotel has been covered with a fine tooth comb by the police and Detective Sarvis in an effort to try and find the weapon which was the means of Hendrie's death.

While this was going on there was a rumor in Sarnia, which for a time created somewhat of a sensation. It was to the effect that a man had been arrested charged with the murder of Hendrie.

Chief of Police Crawford said that no arrests have been made and that none would be made until after the inquest to-morrow night, if any were to be made then.

In the meantime, before the inquest to-morrow afternoon, the funeral of the deceased will be held. The cortege bearing the remains of the deceased will leave the Wees Beach Hotel at 2.30 for the Lakeview cemetery, where interment will be made.

The more that the case is investigated by the police, the more complicated it becomes. They are working on the murder theory.

Charles Kingsley, who found this wounded man, is regarded by the police as a man who can throw some light on the matter, if anyone can.

"Does an automobile help you to forget your troubles?" "Yes," answered Mr. Chuggins, thoughtfully, "my other troubles."—Washington Star.

HOTEL MEN
Will Form Association to Protect Themselves Against "Spotters."

St. Thomas, Aug. 31.—An association of certain of the trades is being formed in the city and county on a mutual protective basis.

The purpose of the organization is to save themselves and their interests against the machinations of private detectives, spotters and informers, and where the offence is on the side of the complainants, as in the case of perjury, that the association be the instrument of the subsequent prosecution of the offenders. The members, too, will meet their aggressors on the same ground and do a little spying on their own account, and they promise to wage a similar war to that which other associations and their lieutenants have been making against them.

To aid, financially and otherwise, those of the society who will be in need of their assistance in judicial proceedings, brought about through the espionage of an informer.

The circumstances under which the recent Port Stanley charges were laid and plans laid to suggest hotelkeepers violate the law have moved the licensed victuallers and others to organize for self-protection.

OFT WEDDED.

Rev. John Taggart, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., Wanted in Many Cities.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 1.—Rev. John Taggart, of Bloomsburg, who disappeared 21 years ago, and returned a short time ago to the aid of his wife, who, thinking he was dead, had married a second time, and who then disappeared a second time from Bloomsburg, is evidently much wanted by women in various parts of the country, according to enquiries received by the police, and made known to-day.

It is known from these letters that he has a wife at Fredonia, N. Y., and children there, too; that another wife and children live near Pittsburgh; that there is still another at Buffalo or Fort Erie, Ont., and that a fourth one died a short time ago at Asheville, N. C., while there is a report that he has deserted wives in Philadelphia and Washington, D. C.

The letters give descriptions of him, which are easily followed, as he has but one eye. When the fact of his return to his first wife was published a short time ago, he declared he could not stand the notoriety, and suddenly disappeared. He has not been heard from since.

Work has just been started on the largest switch-board in the world, which is to be installed in the New York terminal of the Pennsylvania railroad. All the switches of the terminal are to be electrically controlled from this board. It will cost $500,000.

FOUR-TRACK TUNNEL
G. T. R. WILL BUILD ONE FROM DETROIT TO WALKERVILLE.

An Option Already on Strip of Land—Wabash is Declared to be Directly Interested in the Scheme.

Detroit, Sept. 2.—That the Grand Trunk Railroad Company will construct a four-track tunnel from the foot of Dequindre street, Detroit, beneath the Detroit River to Walkerville, is now said to be practically assured.

It is given out from authoritative sources that the Canadian trunk line has secured an option on a strip of land extending three miles back from the river at Walkerville. This option, it is said, is for three years.

The Grand Trunk Railroad has made no attempt to effect a physical connection with the Michigan Central near Windsor, it was stated. Moreover, the Grand Trunk will not attempt to do so. The railroad is now planning to construct a tunnel twice the size of that built by the Michigan Central. It will have a four-track tube instead of a two-track tunnel, such as the Michigan Central has.

According to an engineer familiar with the work of the Michigan Central tunnel, the cost of a tube such as is planned by the Grand Trunk will be from $1,800,000 to $2,500,000. It is said that the Grand Trunk will soon decide whether to build a tunnel of four circular tubes, each containing one track, or to construct one of two elliptical tubes, each containing two tracks.

It is said that the Wabash Railroad is directly interested, also, in the proposition to build another tunnel. The Michigan Central and the Wabash are strong rivals for freight business in the East.

Another interesting consideration is that the Grand Trunk transport boats will have some difficulty buffeting the ice in the coldest part of the winter without the aid of the Michigan Central ferries. The Michigan Central transport boat, the Transfer, is conceded by river men to be the best ice crusher on the river. This boat has been called on many times to keep a passage open between Windsor and Detroit for the transfer of passengers and freight.

MONUMENT TO LAURIER.
Proposal to Erect a Statue in Parish of St. Lin.
Montreal, Sept. 1.—A movement is on foot here to erect a monument to Sir Wilfrid Laurier at St. Lin, his native parish. It is proposed to erect this monument during the Premier's lifetime. On the pedestal the promoters design to have engraved in stone the famous slogan adopted throughout the Dominion during the last Federal election: "Let Laurier finish his work."

It is proposed that every Province shall contribute to this national work. A committee has been formed here for the purpose.

He can never be a power with men who can feel no pity for men.—Chicago Tribune.
