Pilots Make Protest.

Yesterday a launch which was formerly used by the Calypso and which is about the size of Job Bros. launch, was put into commission to replace the Pilot which was lost several months ago, at Cuckhold's Cove. The pilots we learn, do not approve of her and are very pronounced in their condemnation. They say she will be almost useless in rough weather to go out after shipping and the men who go in her will do so at the risk of their lives. The pilots who were on turn last evening refused to go out in the launch and it is said that the others will act similarly.

Special Hints on Gas Cooking.

Sometimes all the gridiron shelves are required; then put the browning shelf over all, but now and then it will be found necessary to move up the cakes, etc., from the second shelf to the first one nearer the browning shelf, in order to acquire a better colour.

Another point often forgotten is that the oven will remain hot for some time after it has had the gas turned off. This heat can be utilised for baking custards, finishing the cooking of large cakes, milk puddings, etc., or if there is no cooking to be done, put in a large vessel containing water to heat, to use for washing up after the meal is concluded.

Another way to reduce the waste of gas is, when grilling or roasting is being done, utilise the heat over the burner by boiling the kettle or soup saucepan over it. It is extravagant to light another burner for boiling purposes when the grill is alight.

WILL SING.—The Rev. W. H. Norman will sing a solo, at Wesley Church at to-morrow's service.

How We Waste the World.

(Chlozsa Money, M.P. in the 'Daily News', London.)

I think I have before pointed out to a great point that more than half of the world's population are simply played ducks and drakes with this world. Now, our world is a very small world. In the scale of worlds, as any student of astronomy will tell you the earth is really not worth mentioning; it is a mote in the illimitable sea of the ether. But there is no need to share in the little which astronomers know to be able to decide that our world is small. The industry of man has already been smitten with practical knowledge of the fact.

From iron ore to cables and from tin to bacon the majority of foods and materials have come to be dearer than they were in those years not remote, when the commercial mind, after first having done its best to starve and discourage inventors and scientists, found that there was money in the things which it despised, and which machinery and scientific appliances, to play havoc with the world's resources. The recipe of the commercial man for the development of a world is charmingly simple. You scrape together all you can lay hands on, and leave waste for posterity.

Is it virgin soil? Then plough and sow and reap until crops refuse to rise, and then pass on to fields and pastures new. Is it timber? Then cut it down, regardless of the fact that the passing of two generations of men will not give back to the world the magnificent trees of which you have robbed it. Is it rubber? Then sap it and stain it red with homicidal hands, and taste the joys of a rubber boom, piling waste on waste and robbery on robbery. Is it coal? Then mine it hastily, guiltily, at whatever cost of life and limb, so that miners may rot in her will do so at the risk of their lives. The pilots who were on turn last evening refused to go out in the launch and it is said that the others will act similarly.

Such and such are the ways in which the world is now being robbed. In the other inhabited world which almost certainly exist, armed with the instruments of observation which doubtless their creatures have fashioned, are probably grinning to see what an awful mess we make of it. And the worst of it is, that the earth reputed to be richest in one man in a hundred is free from mean and sordid cares.

What the world has now seriously to set itself to oppose to the willful waste of the commercial mind is the scientific conservation of its resources. The struggle of the forces of nature which, consciously or unconsciously, is the material life of man—and what is sadder than that few of those engaged in the struggle are conscious of its real character?—must be organized with the weapons which science has already largely supplied.

The best thing which Roosevelt did for our country was to give it a Conservation Commission, charged with the care and oversight of the natural resources of the United States—a land which has already allowed itself to be denuded of timber and of the fertility of great tracts of area. One of the most fruitful discussions at the Imperial Conference was the resolution moved on June 16 by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, urging the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate and report upon the natural resources of the Empire, "the development attained and attainable, and the facilities for production, manufacture and distribution, the trade of each part with the others and with the outside world, the food and raw material requirements of each, and the resources thereof available."

This is an admirable resolution, and it is not surprising that it met with general approval; but it is earnestly to be hoped that the Commission will be permanent thing, like the Roosevelt Conservation Commission. Given such Imperial co-operation, the British Empire might be made of immense value to each of its citizens and to the world at large.

The average mind—the man in the street, as he is sometimes called—will have to be awakened to the fact that he has an increasing practical and bread-and-butter interest in the ends of the world. A great industrial population like ours is seriously affected for good or ill by all sorts of happenings in far-off countries. The wisdom or the folly of men in one part of the world brings gain or loss to those in another part, and the large scale of modern operations causes tens of thousands or hundreds of thousands to mourn through, say, a shortage in material which might easily have been foreseen and prevented.

It is certainly not too much to say that if, when existing Lancashire operatives were little children, the British Empire, taking stock of its resources, and looking forward to a certain enormous increase in the use of cotton, had generously experimented in cotton-growing, Lancashire, and indeed the world, to-day would be free of care with regard to cotton supplies. We have reached 1911, and we know that the possible demand for cotton goods must yet increase enormously, but we are so little concerned that with a niggardly hand we spend a thousand where we ought to spend twenty or a hundred thousand. The cotton trade of the world is well in view of more serious trouble yet, but I observe little sign of realization that we are in the jaws of a catastrophe.

There is a way which is eternal; it is that which we have to fight with Nature to win commodities, and to maintain the framework of civilization against forces which are ever seeking to overwhelm it. There can be no doubt that, short of a cosmic catastrophe, man will rise to such a degree of control of Nature as to maintain himself with far more ease than has yet been known. Already, indeed, science will go much further in its endowment of work, and the hope for man is, therefore, almost illimitable. It is a question of sooner or later, and the men of to-day should strive to make it sooner rather than later. Steps such as are possible as an interpretation of the Laarier resolution, for example, might hasten the abolition of material poverty by a generation.

To-day 5 drunks were discharged, some of them on paying 50 cents each cash hire for being conveyed to the station.

A disorderly who violently resisted arrested was fined $5 or 14 days.

A disorderly also charged with indecent exposure was fined $4 or 14 days.

A drunk was fined $1 or 6 days.

Two disorderlies were each fined $2 or 7 days.

A disorderly in his brother's house was fined $10 or 30 days.

Supt. Grimes summoned John Fitzgerald for a breach of the License Act in procuring liquor for a lad who was alleged to be under 18 years. Deft. showed that the young chap had entered the L. S. P. U. which does not admit persons under that age, and in which case the officials of the Union without hesitation believed him to be over that, and His Honor saw that when he imposed on these people he could certainly impose on deft. The case was dismissed.

Hon. H. J. B. Woods summoned a man for the larceny of a quantity of zinc and copper owned by the Postal Department, valued at $5.24. Mr. Higgins appeared for deft. and the hearing of the case was postponed until Monday.

Chas. H. Legrow, of Baseline, summoned 9 boys of the place and an adult for throwing stones at his house and also for beaming it with rubbish. The man some time ago became converted to the go-preachers sect and met with much opposition owing to it, hence the treatment he alleges to which he was subjected. A large number of witnesses were examined, and the hearing adjourned at 1 p.m. till 2 p.m.

Six carter and six cabmen were summoned by the Council for driving without a license during 1911; all settled.

All You Need is a Cascaret To-Night

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach, Costed Tongue or Constipated Bowels by Morning.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas, take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

Chas. H. Hutchings, Esq., K.C., Deputy Minister of Justice, leaves by the express to-morrow evening accompanied by his son Willie who will enter Sackville College to complete his studies.

Miss Amy Stevenson, daughter of C. P. Stevenson, Esq., also leaves tonight by the express to enter the same College.

SHE BROKE DOWN.—The new steam pilot boat which was put into commission yesterday broke down in the Narrows to-day, and had to be towed in by another pilot boat.

Charlotte ruse is both more appetizing and less sickening if it is flavoured with sherry. This should be stirred in carefully, or the cream will curdle.
