Chimney Fire.

An alarm of fire was sent in from box 225 last night, bringing the Central and East End Companies to the house of Mr. E. M. Jackman, Allandale Road, where a slight fire was in progress, caused through soot igniting in the chimney. The fire was put out before any damage was done.

Everyday Etiquette.

"How should I wear my napkin at a dinner?" inquired George. "I see so many different ways of doing this that I am somewhat confused."
"There is only one correct way," advised his mother. "A man should lay his napkin across his knee. To tuck it in his collar or high in his vest is very bad taste."

Were You Not There?

A RECRUITING CALL.

We heard our mother calling afar:
"Come over, O my children, to the war."
And, home again, wear proudly every scar.
For we were there,
Yes, we were there,
Battling the Huns by land and sea and air.

It was a fight of fury, West and East,
The Kaiser clawed brave Belgium like a beast.
We choked him off. We tore him from his feast.

For we were there,
Yes, we were there,
Did you not help us drive him to his lair?

Sea-dragons, too, we hunted night and day,
We kept the murderers of babes at bay;
All Hell we fought in that long, mad-dining fray.

Were you not there?
Were you not there?
In that great struggle—speak—had you no share?

Don't you remember those who fought and fell
At Mons, the Marne, Langemarck or Neuve Chapelle?
Have you no story of the fight to tell?
Were you not there?
Were you not there?
You do not answer! You but stand and leer!

Did you not see at Stambul or Suez
The German helmets or the Turkish fez?
Surely that chap is lying when he says:
You were not there,
You were not there,
Stand up and say he's lying if you dare!

The war is over. Battle-flags are furled.
The Great Betrayer from his throne is hurled.
It was the Fight of Ages for the world
And we were there,
Yes, we were there,
But you—go hang yourself—you didn't care!

—R. Stanley Weir.

ROUND SHOULDERS FATAL TO BEAUTY.

If you have round shoulders look first into the condition of the general health and see if there is any serious cause for the deformity. If the round shoulders are the result of carelessness, simple corrective exercises should be begun before you are a day older.

The "swirl" is an excellent corrective exercise, and is accomplished by placing the hands before one together in the front. The hands are then lowered, moved backward and upward over the head and down to the first position again. This causes a swirl that beautifully exercises and flattens the shoulder blades. Both feet should be held together, soldier fashion, during this exercise, and the chest should be thrown well forward, with the head up. Perform this swirl ten times when arising in the morning.

An exercise that can easily be performed during the day, without calling attention to what you follow humans might construe as imbecility, is that of locking the hands at the back of the neck. This is particularly for tired muscles after you have been bending over a desk or sewing. During this exercise rest the head rather far back upon the hands and straighten up the shoulder blades.

When the shoulders are rounded, always select a straight backed chair. The easy chair may be comfortable but it is not corrective. If you have difficulty in finding a chair with a sufficiently straight, high back in your home for practice, place a board at the back of the chair and force the shoulders to touch it for at least five minutes.

DETAINED BY FREIGHT.—Owing to the large quantity of freight offering, the S. S. Stephano did not get away for Halifax and New York until 8 a.m. yesterday, the work of loading being continued all night.

Veteran Recruit.

Captain Marston, 6th East Surreys, told some amusing recruiting stories at a Chertsey meeting.
An old man came to his office at Kingston and was asked his age.
"Thirty-nine," he replied.
"Sure?" said Captain Marston.

"Yes," was the reply.
"Been in the Army before?"
"No."
"Sure?"
"Well, yes"—reluctantly.
"Got your discharges?"
"No."
"Sure?"
"Well, I left 'em at home."

"Look in your pocket," said the captain.
The veteran, with a smile which spoke volumes, handed over his discharge papers. They showed he had left the Munster Fusiliers in 1871, and was in his seventieth year.

Boys.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

After a baby has grown out of long clothes and has acquired pants and freckles and so much dirt that well-meaning relatives do not dare to kiss it between meals it becomes a boy.

A boy is nature's answer to the claim that there is no perpetual motion. He is a man, minus pride, ambition, pretense, greed and about 110 pounds. When he grows up he will trade romance, energy, bashfulness, warts and a snag-proof stomach for these other possessions. A boy is always getting the worst of it in some trade or other.

The world is so full of boys that it is impossible to touch off a band or a ball game without collecting a thousand of them. Boys are not ornamental but they are useful. If it were not for boys the newspapers of the country would go undelivered and unread and a thousand circus elephants would die of thirst. Boys are also useful in running errands. The zest with which a boy does an errand is only equalled by the earnestness with which an old fashioned minister approaches the conclusion of his sermon. With the aid of five or six adults a boy can readily do all the errands for a family of two.

The boy is a natural spectator, spectating is his passion. He watches parades, fires, fights, ball games, dogs, ice waggons, mud turtles, bumble bees, automobiles, presidents, plain drunks, hand organs and aeroplanes with equal fervor. But he will not watch the clock. The man who invents a clock that will stand on its head and sing a song with its strikes, will confer a great boon on millions of families whose boys are forever getting home to dinner about supper time.

Boys are not popular except with their parents, but they have many fine points. One of them is the fact that they will grow up to be men some day. Another is their entire trustworthiness. You can rely absolutely on a boy if you know what to rely on. Trust him to get into trouble every day and he will never disappoint you.

Boys are abstemious, seldom eating, except when awake. They are also very durable. This accounts for the fact that the world is still populous. A boy, if not washed too much and if kept in a cool, dry place for a while after each accident, will survive fire-works, broken bones, swimming holes, hornets, runaways, flat fights, pirate bands, Indian massacres and nine pieces of pie at a sitting. If only some method of making a boy's clothes as durable as he is could be discovered, life would become more attractive for boy growers.
