CHAPTER VIII. Exith Is Forced to Play the Game. Caroline's departure was again intersupted by the inopportune re-entrance from the back hall of Mr. Arrelsford, who was accompanied by two soldiers, whom he directed to remain by the door. As he advanced rapidly toward Mrs. Varney, Caroline stepped aside toward the rear window.

"Is he—" began Arrelsford, turning toward the window, and starting back in surprise as he observed Caroline for the first time.
"Yes, he is there," answered the wo-

"Yes, he is there, answered the worman.
"Oh, Mrs. Varney," cried Caroline,
"there's a heap of soldiers out in your back yard here. You don't reckon anything's the matter, do you?"
The girl did not lower her voice, and was greatly surprised at the immediate order for silence which proceeded from
Mr. Arrelsford, whose presence she acknowledged with a very cool, indifferent

"Thank you very much, Mrs. Varney," answered Caroline. "Come, Martha." As she turned, she hesitated. "You don't reckon she could go with me somewhere else, do you?"

"Why, where else do you want to go at this hour, my dear girl?" asked Mrs. Varney.

As soon as she had left the room, pass ing between the two soldiers, Arrelsford took up the conversation. He spoke quickly and in a sharp voice. He was widently excited. What is she going to do at the teleraph office?" he asked.

"I have no idea," answered the woman.
"Has she had any conversation with him?" said Arrelsford, pointing to the front of the house.

"They were talking together in this came. but it room early this evening before you came the first time, but it isn't possible she tell me.

Anything is possible," snapped Arrels-Anything is possible, snapped Affels-ford impatiently. He was evidently de-termined to suspect everybody, and leave no stone unturned to prevent the fallure of his plans. "Corporal," he cried, "have Eddinger follow that girl. He must get to the telegraph office as soon as she does, and don't let any dispatch she tries to send get out before I see it. Let her live it in, but hold it. Make no mistake about that. Get an order from the department for you to bring it to me." As the Corporal saluted and turned away to give the order, Arrelsford faced Mrs. Varney again. "Are they both out

'Yes," answered the woman. "Did you "Yes," answered the woman. "Did you bring the man from Libby Prison?"
"I did, the guards have him out in the street on the other side of the house. When we get Thorne in here alone I'll have him brought over to that back winlow and shoved into the room."

"He won't see you it it is dark in the hall." He turned to the Corporal who had re-entered and resumed his station.
"Turn out those lights out there," he said. "We can close these curtains, can't "Certainly," said Mrs. Varney, open-ing the rear door and drawing the heavy portleres, but leaving space between them to that anyone in the dark hall could see through them but not be seen from the Montreal.

'I don't want too much light in here, either," said Arrelsford. As he spoke he blew out the candles in the two candelabra which had been placed on the different tables, and left the large. on the different tables, and left the large, long room dimly illuminated by the candles in the sconces on the walls.

Mrs. Varney watched him with fascinated awe. In spite of herself there still lingered a hope that Arrelsford might be mistaken. Thorne had enlisted her interest, and he might under other conditions have aroused her matronly affections, and she was hoping against hope that he might yet prove himself innecent not only because of his persondles in the sconces on the walls. innocent, not only because of his personality, but as well because the thought that she might have entertained a spy was repugnant to her, and because honor of the Dumont family, which Arrelsford, meantime, completed his preparations by moving the couch which Caroline Mitford had placed before the window back to the wall.

"Now, Mrs. Varney," he said, stepping far back out of sight of the window, will you open the curtains? Do it casually, carelessly, please, so as not to awaken suspicion if you are seen."

"But your soldiers, won't they—"

"They are all at the back of the house. They came in the back way, and the field in front is absolutely clear, although I have men concealed in the street to stop anyone who may attempt to escape that way."

Mrs. Varney walked over to the window and drew back the curtains. She stood

Mrs. Varney walked over to the window and drew back the curtains. She stood for a moment looking out into the clear, peaceful quietness of a soft spring night. The moon was full, and being somewhat low shone through the long windows and into the room, the candle light not being bright anough to dim its radiance. Her bright enough to dim its radiance. Her task being completed, she turned, and once more the man who was in command pointed across the hall toward the room on the other side.

"Oh," returned Mrs. Varney, "if that is the case, Martha must go with you."
"You know we haven't a single servant with you where the one whose," Caroline said in explanation of her request.
"I know," said Mrs. Varney, "and, Martha, don't leave her for an instant."
"No'm," answered Martha, "Ah'll take the one who suggester that—"
"But I was sure then, and now—"
"Her here the one who suggester that—"
"But I was sure then, and now—"

"Has he confessed?" asked Mrs. Var-

"No, no," answered the girl with glance of fear and apprehension toward Arrelsford, who stood staring menacingly "Don't speak so loud," whispered the Secret Service agent.
"Edith," said her mother soothingly," what is it that has changed you?"
She waited for an answer, but none came. The girl's face had been very pale but it now flushed suddenly with color. "Dear." said her mother, "you must "Impossible!" returned Mrs. Varney controlling her voice so that the other occupant of the room could not hear. "Yes," faltered the girl, "and I-someone else must do it."

"You don't mean," said Mrs. Varney,

LONDON ORANGEMEN TO PAY ST. THOMAS VISIT

Will Attend Divine Service in Railway City On Sunday.

Arrangements have been completed by which a large party of local Orangemen will go to St. Thomas by special train on Sunday next and march to church in the afternoon. On the following Sunday, July 7, the St. Themas Orangemen will pay a return visit, and will attend a service here accompanied by the London Orangemen. Rev. Mr. Appleyard will preach

Next Sunday the recently organized fife and drum band, which is eighteen strong, and is under the leadership of Mr. Robert Clare, will make its first ublic appearance. The local men have nvited the members of the Sons of England and the ladies' Orange lodges to go with them to St. Thomas, and a arge turnout is expected.

A committee composed of Wor. Bro F. H. Wright, chairman, and Wor. Bros. George Loney, secretary; A. Niven and T. Fox, is looking after the arrangements. This year the big Twelfth of July celebration will be held in Brantford,

"Just to—to the telegraph office," answered Caroline.

Mr. Arreisford, who had been waiting with ill-concealed impatience during this dialogue, started violently.

"Now!" exclaimed Mrs. Varney in great surprise, not noticing the actions of her latest guest. "At this time of night?"

"Yes," answered Caroline, "it is on the side," she said.

silence. The officer, unable to get any further information out of the man, said nothing until the train had passed through the tunnel and reached the station at Port Huron. Then the peeved traveller was promptly asked to descend from the car and accompany the official. Sizing up the situation more discreetly than he had a short time before, the man complied with the request. After a little heart-to-heart talk in the United States detention room, he was allowed to pro-
