

HOUSE DEBATES RAILWAY BILLS

Mr. Borden's Amendment Regarding Cheaper Fares is Voted Down

POWERS OF COMMISSION

Notice of Amendments Proposed in Bill to Regulate Elections

Ottawa, June 30.—In anticipation of to-morrow's holiday, the House of Commons today put in a real hard day's work. The civil service bill was put through committee and the important bill amending the railway act was passed, an important feature of the discussion on the bill being a strong defense of the railways by the minister of railways. One of the amendments voted down was offered by Mr. Monk, who desired the appointment of a French-Canadian secretary of the railway commission. The government did not consider it necessary, but Mr. Monk insisted upon a decision, and the result was the defeat of his amendment by a vote of 32 to 16. All the ministerial members from Quebec present in the House voted against the amendment. An amendment by Mr. Northrup Hastings to have the railway commission force the great trunk railways to fulfill obligations assumed when it obtained control of the Belleville and North Hastings railways was defeated by a vote of 77 to 41. Hon. Mr. Aylesworth maintaining that it was a matter for the courts, not the railway commission. Mr. Boyce complained of the clause in the act which imposes a penalty upon any railway employee who willfully or negligently violates the by-laws of the company. Mr. Graham promised before the bill was introduced an amendment removing this double liability. The proposed amendment was introduced by Mr. Borden to the effect that the railway commission should institute an inquiry to ascertain if the penalty should not be reduced to two cents a day for each day of absence from work. Mr. Borden's amendment was defeated by a vote of 77 to 41. Hon. Mr. Aylesworth maintaining that it was a matter for the courts, not the railway commission. Mr. Graham said the people were more interested in cheap freight rates than in cheap passenger fares. His view proposed. Mr. Graham argued that Canada was too large and sparsely settled to admit of a two-cent rate throughout the Dominion. Comparisons with the thickly settled countries of Europe were made. He declined to accept the amendment of Mr. Borden, and it was voted down by a vote of 74 to 40. Mr. Maclean voted with the government. Mr. Graham's bill to amend the railway act by bringing telegraphs and telephones under control of the railway commission was passed after an amendment by Mr. Aylesworth had been accepted, giving the commission power to order railways to elevate or lower their tracks in crowded cities. This amendment was not quite clear on this point. When the civil service bill was taken up, Mr. Fisher introduced an amendment having for its object the exclusion of political influence from the commission. Civil servants attempting to influence the commission would lose their jobs. Other persons becoming liable to a year's imprisonment. The House adjourned, beginning into supply and passing a number of votes. In anticipation of the discussion on the election act amendment bill, which will commence on Thursday, notice was given yesterday by Mr. Alcorn, member for Prince Edward, of a series of amendments, embodying his election bill, which was introduced last March. Notice has also been given by Mr. Macdonald providing that polling day for the Dominion shall be a general holiday. Mr. Alcorn's amendments are of a drastic character. Among other provisions they absolutely prohibit the hiring of any class of contractors for election day, and provide a heavy penalty for an offence of this nature.
