It's a guid sight for sair e'en to see a young creature like you at the castle—a sight we has nay seen for money a lang year."

Dolores smiled brightly up into the old woman's kindly face, and that smile completely won the housekeeper's heart. She poured the girl's tea from the tiry silver pot, carved for her the little broiled bird, pressed upon her notice the crisp, hot buttered toast, and fluttered about her as a hen flutteres dount a chicken, full of solicitude and friendliness. Dolores drank her tea and ate her luncheon, talk ing the while, and gleaning considerable information about the old castle and her new employer from Mrs. Magruder, who became quite garrulous.

"Do you suppose you can learn to love and woman's kindle face, except when all her life. She thinks much of the graces and ceremony, just as she has done all her life. A MONSTROUS WRONG

CHAPTER XV.

As the carriage containing Dolores rolled into the porch of Kindoch Castle, Miss MacKinloch pulled her drawing room bell sharply. The Highlander, who was a pall-porter, footman, and general factotum of the establishment, again appeared at her summons.

"Let Miss Wynn be shown up to her and make her comfortable."

They were quite eager to see Dolores. Jealous already of the new companion of their aged and wealthy kinswoman, they were anxious to make her acquaintance, and prove her, what they were fully persuaded she must be, "an adventurous and designing creature." That Miss MacKinloch had perceived their anxieties on the subject was only too plain, and that she was taking a malicious delight in prolonging their suspense was also only too evident.

In accordance with Miss MacKinloch's directions, therefore, when Dolores slighted from the forefore, when Dolores alighted from the forefore, when Dolores alighted from the forefore, when Dolores alighted from the forefore of Dolores chamber. She set her tender red mouth in a resolute expression that showed how deeply her desire to repay her debt to her uncle had taken root in her mind.

Mrs. Magruder returned, bearing a little tray upon which was apread a delicate luncheon. She placed this on a small table, and wheeled the latter to the side of the girl.

she opened a door at one end of the alcove, and Dolores obtained a view of a large and well-lighted dressing-closet, from which a second door opened into an adjoining chamber. Mrs. Magruder reclosed the opening and again withdrew, leaving the girl to solitude.

Meanwhile, Miss MacKinloch remained in the drawing-room with her distant kinswomen until she was thoroughly wearied of them both, and of the fulsome compliments which the corpulent mother and the lean daughter alike delighted to between the daughter might be useful to advertisements say, and in the same way that a daughter might be useful to her mother. Dolores assented.

"You will be treated in all respects as my equal in rank," continued Miss Mac Kinloch. "I want you to feel at home medicine did me no good. When Mrs. Dougal and Miss Dougal had gained the privacy of the chamber allotted to them, their discontent, which had been masked in the presence of their hostess by an appearance of smiling unconcern, burst forth into active expression.

"You may say what you choose, Jose pha," said the elder lady, energetically, but I shall stay here until I know all about this Miss Wynn Miss Joe is very old, and is likely to fall a prey to some designing adventuress, and leave every farthing of her property away from us, after all our fawning upon her, and numing you after her, and all our expectations, and the leave the same here to prey upon me, she came here to prey upon me, she came Dolores dressed herself for dinner, putting on a long black silk gown, with scarlet ribbons in her hair and at her throat, Mrs. Magrader came to show her down to the drawing room. Miss MacKinloch and her guests were already there, and the aged lady of the castle presented her new companion to her kinswomen with a melicious twinkle in her haid, bright eyes.

It is a curious fact, so firm in texture is the paper of a genuine Bank of England note that burning alone can hardly destroy it. The authorities have in a little glazed frame the remnants of a note which was in the great fire of Chicago. Though completely charred and black, the paper still holds together, and the printing of the note is said to be sufficiently legible to establish its genuine-ness and to warrant its being cashed.

THE Subscriber begs to inform the Public that the printing of the note is said to be sufficiently legible to establish its genuine-ness and to warrant its being cashed.

HAIR RENEWER was the first preparation perrectly adapted to come diseases of the scalp, and the first suc-ceasful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR REXEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparal-leled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises. The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote conntries, where they had never made an effort for

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not tions, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.
