* Hitherto, I have not given a place, in these vocabularies, to the Jews, Chaldeans, Syrians, Arabians, or Affyrians. Yet I have discovered other affinities between ~~their languages~~ and those of the Americans. In a more extensive comparative view of the languages of these nations and those of the people of the new-world, than that which I now offer to the public, it will be proper to examine, with attention, the languages of all the nations of Asia, in particular. All our inquiries seem to favour the opinion, that this great portion of the earth gave birth to the original families of mankind. In what particular part of the continent these families received their birth, we shall, perhaps, never know with absolute certainty. But the active curiosity of man, aided by labour and research, is capable of conducting us very far. Knowledge is gradually revealed to us; and it becomes mankind to be grateful for the revelation. Time, which has scat-
