The Skin and Scalp.

What the World Has Reen Want ing for Centuries.

The greatest discovery of our day, so far as large portion of humanity is concerned, is CAR EDLINE, an article prepared from petroleum, and which effects a complete and radical cure in cases of the scalp, has become thin and tends to fall out. It is also a speedy restorative, and while its use secures a luxuriant growth of hoir, it also brings back the natural color and gives the most complete satisfaction in the using The infling out of the hair, the accumulations of dandruff, and the premature change of color, are all evidences of a diseased condition of the scalp and the gl-nds which nourish the hair. To arrest these causes the article used must possess medical as well as chemical virtues, and the change must begin under the scalp to be of permanent and lasting benefit. Such an article is CARBOLINE, and, like many other wonderful discoveries, it is found to consist of elements almost in their natural state. Petroleum oil is the article which is made to work such extraordinary results, but it is after it has been chemically treated and completely desdorized that it is in proper condition for the toilet. It was in far-off Rusila that the effect of petroleum upon the hair was first observed, a government officer having noticed that a partially baid-headed servant of his, when trimming the lumps, had a habit of wiping his oil besaneared hands in his scanty locks, which had fallen out, were completely restored in a few weeks. These experiments were harved ones. The oil was tried on horses and cattle that had lost their hair from the cattle plague, and the results were as rapid as they were marvelous. The manes and even the falls of horses, which had fallen out, were completely restored in a few weeks. These experiments were heralded to the world: but the knowledge was practically useless to the prematurely baid and gray, an one in civilized society could tolerate the use of refined petroleum as a dressing for the hair. DEAR SIR—I take great pleasure in informing you of the most gratifying results of the use of CARBOLINE in my own case. For three years thet op of my head has been completely baid and smooth, and I had quite given up any hope of restoring the hair. Four weeks ago I notice d the advertisement of CARBOLINE, and on the recommendation of a friend, I concluded to try a bottle without any great hopes of good results;
however, I have now used it less than a month and, to my most agreeable astonishment, my head is completely covered with a fine, short, healthy growth of hair, which has every ap pearance of continued grewth; and I confidently believe it will restore it as completely as ever it was in my youth.

I take great pleasure in offering you this testmonial, and you have my permission to publish JOSEPH E. POND. Jr. Attorney at Law, North Attleboro', Mass., says: For more than twenty years a portion of my head has been as smooth and free from hair as a billiard ball, but some eight weeks ago I was induced to try your CAIBOLINE, and the effects have been simply wonderful. Where no hair has been seen for years, there now appears a thick growth. It is growing now nearly as rapidly as hair does after it is cut. You may use the above testimonial if you choose, and may refer to me for its truth.

MR. W. S. GOLD, No. 70 River avenue, Allegheny City, Pa., writes to us that he had his head badly scalded by hot water, and that CARBOLINE not only cured his head but caused his hair to grow luxuriantly.

ALFRED PHILLIPS, Druggist. Gloversville, N. Y., says: My wife has iried CARBOLINE, and she has now a coating of hair over the top of her head an inch long where her head has been entirely BALD for years.

DONGOLA, Ill., March 19, 1879.

SIRS,—By the persuasion of a friend I began to use CARBOLINE on my head last September, which had been baid for twenty years, and now I have a nice growth of hair on my head that surprises everybody that has observed the fact.

A. G. WILLIAMS, M. D.

THOMAS LAWRENCE, M. D., Mill Creek Ill., says: I can cheerfully recommend CARBOLINE, and now have a fine suit of hair growing where there was no appearance before I began using CARBOLINE.

I certify to the above, besides selling Dr. Lewrence the CARBOLINE.

When life's autumn cometh,
And summer time is gone,
And of the many friends of youth
Death leaves us all alone.
What brings youth olde more o'er us?
What sets our hearts aglow?
'Its when faces come before us
We knew long, long ago.

'Tis then regretful mem'ry 'Tis then regretful mem'ry Brings back our happy youth,
Ere childhood's ficeting fancy
Was changed to manhood's truth;
The faces loved and cherished
Steal o'er us, though we know
In time they've faded, perished,
Since we knew them long ago.

Though years a veil cast o'er us,
And dim our memory's eye,
As faces come before us,
We can't forbear a sigh;
For long loved, long lost faces,
With recollection low,
Bring back the times, the places,
We loved, long, long ago.

The sad, sad thoughts which often Will mar each heartfelt Joy, Which time can only soften, And death alone destroy, Are youthful recollections Through Time's unceasing flow, Which bring us sad reflections Of the loved ones, long ago.

ST. THOMAS AQUINAS.

A Sketch of the Angel of the Schools.

[From the Weekly Register.) His Holiness' encyclical Æterni Patris has so recently (on the 4th of August, 1879) contrated anew the gaze of all Christendom upon the exceptional glory of St. Thomas Aquinas as "inter scholasticos doctores omnium princeps et magister" that it can hardly be matter for surprise if in more than one direction the well-known story of his life has even within so brief an interval, been again and yet/again recounted. The history of the career and writings of the Angelic Doctor has been before the world now for six cen-turies and a half. His biographers have been very numerous. His works have been printed in countless editions, and have elicited pane- produced the "Summa" as the supreme outgyrics upon their author in every language that has a literature. The earliest record of his life was that penned by Bartholomew of Lucca, who had, of all men, the most intimate mowledge of the saint's character, seeing that he was for some years his confessor. Another memoir was compiled by William Tocco, the Prior of Benevento, who compiled it for the Blessed Thomas Aquinas' canoniza-ation. Saints have been his eulogists. Popes have again and again sung his praises in terms of unmeasured admiration. The reigning Pontift, our Most Holy Father Pope Leo the Thirteenth, in referring as he did only the other day to the Angelic Dector, followed in the wake of very many of his illustrious predecessors. What, among other things, said his Holiness, Leo the Thirteenth of St. Thomas Aquinas? He declared that he is rightly and deservedly esteemed the special bulwark and glory of the Catholic faith-Catholica Ecclesia singulare prosidium et decus iure meritoque habeatur. What are his salient characteristics? Leo the Thirteenth has epitomized them in a sentence—his spirit humble and swift, his memory ready and tenacious, his life spotless throughout a lover of truth for its own sake, richly endowed with honor and divine science, like the sun he heated the world with the ardor of his virtues and filled it with the splendor of his teachings soli comparatus, orbem terrarum calore virtutum fovit. et doctrina splendore complevit. The Counts of Aquino, from whom this great saint, and in some respects greatest of all the doctors of the Church, was descended. originally deriving their pedigree from a Prince of Lombardy, have flourished, now in the Neapolitan territory, for upwards of ten centuries. Towards the close of 1226-that is is 653 years ago—the author of the "Summa Theologica" was born at Balcastro. He received in baptism the name of Thomas and vindicated the right from his tenderes. years upwards to the epithet which is now distinctively his-Angelic. Even as an infant he never betrayed anything at all of the peevishness and petulance of childhood. His parents were both of them of noble blood, his father being Landulph, Count of Aquino, while his mother, Theodora, was the daughter of the Count of Theote. So sweet was the serenity of his countenance that throughout life he was never known to have evidenced, even by a look, that he was ruffled. Every one who has written about him, from the two earliest of his biographers, already named, down to the latest and the least pretentious, speakel of him in the same strain. There never has been before the world but one view of the character of St. Thomas Aquinas. All accounts of him are coincident. The portraitures of him are so exactly alike that no doubt is left in the mind of any observer as to their absclute truthfulness or verisimilitude. His education began when he was a little creature of five, he being placed by his father at that tender age, in 1231, under the care of the monks of the grand old Abbey of Monte Cassino. His virtues and intelligence have become more strained and sufficiently in their expansion were the delight of his A three-year old child of Mr. Bigouette, teachers until five years more had clapsed. that the intense dislike of the Russian masses chec, was vesterday horribly burnt from When he was a boy of ten he was already so far advanced in scholarship that he was sent | find expression in a fierce desire for war. to Naples in 1236, and enrolled there as a Moreover, in spite of efforts to conceal or student at the University. Notwithstanding the licentiousness of his surroundings, he lived there, as Alban Butler puts it, as Daniel lived in Babylon and Tobias in Nineve. Both in rhetoric and in philosophy, as later on in theology, he sat at the feet of Peter-rhetoric he learned under Peter Martin, philosophy Czarewitch himself will unfold to him a under l'eter of Hibernia. At seventeen years of age-otherwise in 1243-Thomas Aquinas, acting in obedience to an impulse which he had regarded as a direct call from Heaven, received the habit as a Dominican. The course he had thus taken was strenuously, and even fiercely, opposed by his relatives. Two of his brothers who were officers of the Emperor's Counters Theodora, captured him near falling into their hands, they endeavored, but being so determined that they had no alternative but to conduct him, still arrayed in his Dominican dress, to the paternal estate of Rocca Secca. There his resolution was, for long months together, opposed to his tamily, his mother frequently appealing to him with tears and adjurations, his sisters with entreaties, his brothers with alternate ferocity and treachery. These latter at one time tore his Dominican habit into shreds and at another, even went the length of laving siege however, preserved unsulfied by snatching up a flaming firebrand, and with it driving the tempter from his apartment. Innocent IV., at length summoning Thomas Aquinas to struck with admiration by his virtues and his learning, that he confirmed him in his decision as to remaining a Dominican. Hastening from Rome in company with the General of the Order, John the Teutonic, Thomas went by way of Paris to Cologne, where the great theological teacher of the age, Albertus Magnus, then flourished. Under him his human and Divine knowledge ripened and expanded. So veiled was his learning by his humility and his silence that among his fellow students he received the title of the Dumb Ox Albertus Magnus, having one day, however, propounded to him for solution several most complicated problems, these were one and all so answered by Thomas Aquinas, under the constraint of the duty of obedience, that Albertus cried out in a transport of admira-tion: "We call him a dumb ox, but he will. give such a bellow in learning as will be heard all over the world." At Paris in 1245, still under the tutelege of Albertus Magnus, Thomas completed his studies, and at twenty-three himself began to teach. Thenceforth for five-and-twenty years he held his ground | deal cn Vair if not in action. in the recognition of all Christendom as teacher who was not merely unrivalled, but unapproached. Summoned to the Council of . Lyons in 1274 by Pope Gregory X., Thomas Aquinas, in hastening thither, was seized with so sharp an attack of illness on the way that age. His works have been printed in nineteen folio volumes. They have perpetuated his glory as the greatest theological teacher of the Church of God. His "Summa theologica" especially has for six centuries been recognized as a consummate master-piece. Honors innumerable have been showered upon his sainted memory. In 1323 Pope John XXII. solemnly canonized bim. 1567 Pope Pius V. commanded his festival to be kept equal with those of the four doctors of the Western Church. The Bollandists relate the miracles performed at his tomb in Toulouse. Cardinal Newman, in our own day speaking of the poet born under the shadow of Holy Church, says that "she can even make schoolmen of poets as she made St. Thomas, till logic becomes poetical..' In attestation of the truth of which it is only necessary to remember that the Angelical Prince of the Schools and Doctor of the Church who come of the vast and orbicular genius, composed that lovely office of Corpus Christi, which includes within it those divine snatches of song which for six centuries and more have been so familiar to the ears and so dear to the hearts of the Catholics, as sung either processionally or within the rails of the sanctuary at Benediction of the Most Adorable Encharist.

The Late Dr. Bernard Rayauagh

The following obituary notice is taken from the Dublin Freeman's Journal of 22nd October ult.:- Yesterday morning the remains of the above distinguished physician were conveyed to their final resting place in the family burying ground in the new cemetery of St. Lawrence. The funeral was attended by a large number of the clergy, secular and regular, of the city, by his brothers in the medical profession, and by the members of the St. Vincent de Paul Society-a society of which he was an active member. Dr. Kavanagh, though resident in Limerick from the commencement of his professional career, belonged to an old and respectable family in Carlow. Having prosecuted his studies in Ireland, and at the iniversity of Glasgow, where he obtained his legree, he passed over to the Continent, and spent several years in attendance at the various hospitals and medical schools of Paris, under the most distinguished professors. He was a favorite pupil of the late Sir William Wilde in the treatment of diseases of the eye and ear, and obtained from Dr. Stokes the stethoscopic prize, the highest honor then attainable by an Irish medical student. For upwards of twenty-five years he pursued with untiring energy and zeal the duties of his profession, gaining the good will and confi dence of all with whom he came in contact. His death resulted from congestion of the lungs, brought on by a severe cold contracted in the discharge of his duties. The announcement of his death will be read with deep regret not only by thousands in his adopted city, and in those parts of the South of Ireland to which his labors extended, but by his professional brethren in every part of Ireland. No one could know him without loving him for his uprightness and charity, and for his unwentied energy and zeal in the discharge of his duties. In losing him his sorrowing family have lost a kind husband and a loving father, and Limerick one of its best and worthiest citizens. Dr. Kavanagh was brother of Henry Kavanagh, Esq., Inspector of Customs ports for Central Canada; of Mr. J. J. Kavanagh and Mrs. J. C. Bellenu, of Gaspe Basin, and of Sister Mary Beatrice, of the Sisters of Mercy,

THE WARLIKE FEELING IN EUROPE.

France, Russia and Germany. There is a growing belief here that things are fast tending to a great European war. The relations between Russia and Germany than ever, and we have it reported to-night to their German neighbors is beginning to to ignore it, the fact is becoming more apparent that Russia and France have exchanged confidences. Orloff is constantly with Waddington: the Russian Imperial Princes now in Paris are frequently closeted with the French Foreign Minister; and it is said the special mission. It is regarded as an ominous coincidence that simultaneously with the withdrawal by the Czar of the order prohibiting Russian journals from using harsh language towards Germany, the French Press has become not only caustic, but defiant. One organ—the Monitour—in an article on the customs league proposed by army in Tuscany, waylaying him when he Prince Bismarck, informs him that he can fled from the pursuit of his mother, the neither expect treaties nor peace with France until he has restored Alsace and Lorraine to Acquapendente. Immediately upon his the bosom from which he treacherously tore them. It is asserted that on the afternoon in vain, to tear off his habit, his resistance the Bourse panic was caused in Paris by a menace in the Berlin Tageblatt, telegrams were sent to the generals commanding the five French army corps lying nearest the German trontier to hold themselves in readiness, and to warn their staffs to be prepared for further orders. Another sign of the brooding storm is discerned in Manteuflel's speech at Metz, in which he plainly declared he sees a hurricane gathering in the West, and adds that Germany does not fear it. The Governor-General of the to his chastity, which the young Dominican, annexed provinces has a most unpleasant report to make to his Imperial master. Last week he held his official receptions at Metz. He addressed the Municipal Council and other public boards of the city, num-Rome, was so impressed, upon examining bering 240 individuals. His speech was him, with the validity of his vocation, and so kindly and flattering—very much indeed out kindly and flattering-very much indeed out of the manner of the stern old warrior who has been compared to Blucher and Mufiling. When he had spoken there was no reply, the councillors and other dignituries simply bowing in solemn and significant silence. Next day, Thursday, he invited them all, together with the city clergy, to a grand banquet, and only one man—the Mayor of the city, a banker, named Schuyler—answered the invitation. This is a decisive commentary on the stories of popular sympathy with the German rule which we heard so much of during the late visit of the Emperor. Here is another item of political gossip making the rounds. It is in effect that Bismarck privately assured Gortschakoff that only the vital interests of Germany, and in no sense a feeling of hostility to Russia has inspired his policy regarding Eastern Europe, and that both Germany and Austria are not only willing but anxious to maintain the relation of the Tripartite Treaty, and to facilitate by every effort of benevolent neutrality Russia's designs in Asia. You see there is a great
