

public lands are concerned, the Government can act as its policy dictates, but there is no shadow of an excuse for taking away the timber from one man to whom they have already sold it and giving it to another, and underneath the attempts to do so, personal motives in many cases can be found.