The machinists on the Canadian Pacific, from Fort William to Vancouver, have an agreement which went into effect a year ago, but the agreement does not say anything about the question of hours. On the eastern system of the C.P.R. and on the G.T.R. the machinists have no agreement, and for some time past the men amployed on these railways have been perfecting an organization, which, no doubt, means that they will in the proper time make a demand for shorter hours and other points not at present recognized.
