No small fruit is better for the various methods of keeping for winter use than the raspberry, with the possible exception of the strawberry.

For raspberry jam, pick over fresh berries, wash them and smash them a few at a time, with a wooden masher in a preserving kettle. Heat slowly to boiling point, and add gradually an equal quantity of heated sugar. Cook slowly for 45 minutes. Pour into jars or jelly glasses and cover when cool with paraffine. A third of the raspberries may be replaced by rhubarb from which the tough skin has been stripped, and which has been cut into cubes. This makes a more tart preserve than the raspberries alone, and is of course, cheaper.

To preserve raspberries whole in a rich juice, pack them in clean jars and cover them with a syrup made by boiling equal parts of sugar and water for five minutes. Place the jars, covered, but not sealed, in a sterilizer in cold water, bring the water to a boil, and boil fifteen minutes; remove from the water, seal jars and cool.

To can raspberries, which is much the cheapest way to keep them, now that sugar is so dear, make a thin syrup by boiling for ten minutes, sugar and water in a proportion to two and a half or even three cups of water to one pound of sugar. Pour this syrup over the berries, packed clean in clean jars, filling the jars completely; sterilize above for 20 minutes after the boiling point is reached, and seal. Canned raspberries keep their shape and much of their original flavor if they are done this way.

A delicious jelly can be made by taking equal quantities of raspberries and currants, boiling water until the currants look white, draining through a jelly bag, boiling the juice five minutes, adding an equal quantity of heated sugar and boiling five minutes.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN

PROTESTS AGAINST TOY SOLDIERS, ETC.

Would Also Fight Military Drill in Schools.

There is a Canadian branch of the "Women's International League for Peace and Freedom" in Toronto, which sends out the following appeal to Canadian women, asking them to fight against the spirit of hatred which the war has left in its wake, and protest against military drill in Canadian schools, because it places emphasis on might rather than right. It also goes further, advocating a campaign against the manufacture and purchase of such military toys as tin soldiers, subma-

The Canadian branch of the league is situated at 32 Westminister avenue, Toronto, and asks that any personal opinions of readers on this matter be forwarded there, to the secretary, Miss Harriet Dunlop. The article, which is addressed to the women of Canada, reads as follows:

"The war is over and its aftermath has left the peoples of Europe crushed. It is almost impossible to rejoice in our own victory when we think not only of the thousands of men left in physical and mental conditions somewhat worse than death, but of the hundreds of thousands in Europe who are near starvation, and the millions of women and multitudes of wasted and joyless little children all slowly perishing from lack of food and shelter in these respect Allies and enemies suffer alike.

"It is true there are those who say that the suffering, especially in Central Europe is only fitting punishment for the common ignorance as to the underlying causes of war—beholders, our interests, our own futures, are in danger. We know that disease and plagues are being added to the miseries of these wretched war victims, and disease and plagues are now the national boundaries, they cross rivers and oceans, they strike rich and poor.

Hated Inheritance.
"The war's heritage of horror for little children is a terrible one. It is indeed a terrible one, but we have an idea of the horror of the war—heredity of the war—a heritage of hatred, a hideous thing which is breeding intolerance and brutality in the young. It is a heritage of hatred in many and varied ways and steadily preparing the way for future wars.

"It has always been the privilege of the natural vocation of women to comfort and to care for humanity, therefore it would seem that the efforts of this spirit of hatred in the spirit of humanity, must surely be our immediate duty.

"It is a task as urgent as the present time as was the greatest work we carried on for the sick and wounded during the war, and if we do not at once undertake it the lessons of the war will be lost, and civilization itself may decay.

"Perhaps you ask, what can we do? Where shall we begin? May we suggest that as we have already opened commercial relations with our former enemies for the sake of gain, we as women should stand on a higher plane and banish hatred from our hearts for the sake of humanity—only so will it be possible for us to understand and intelligently deal with the grave conditions of today.

Against Military Drill.
"Then let us help in the work of true reconstruction by seeing that the children of Canada are trained first of all to respect human life, and that they should protect against military drill in our schools, because it places emphasis on might, and not on right. It should be instead a system of physical training which will benefit girls as well as boys; also we should discourage the teaching of anything which tends to rouse hatred or scorn for other peoples.

"The action of the women of Central Europe who have asked their governments to prohibit the making of military toys, such as tin soldiers, tin marines, etc., might well be followed by us, and a campaign against the purchasing of such toys in the meantime, would be of educational value.

"In short, it should be our business to strip war of all its tinsel and its false glory, and instead of talking about atrocities we may show the world that war itself is the great atrocity. Women of Canada, will you take up this dividing line? Much can be done as individuals, more may be done through your organizations. Will you not at least try to achieve what men never can accomplish alone, the establishment of universal peace and freedom?

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

He that getteth a wife beginneth a possession; a help like unto himself and a pillar of rest.—Ecclesiastes.

Veranda Chats.
I noticed the column of correspondence that some were asking about contests, so am sending two. Will you please send me some if you have any in the Mail-Box.

I am enclosing ten cents for Children's Hospital fund. I have another contest which is rather long to write if one wants it. How many of you will write to Miss Grey and tell her to forward the letter to me, I will copy the other contest and send it. Will you please send me the stocking-foot pattern, Miss Grey?

Ans.—Thank you very much for the contest and the hospital contribution.

Wadding Queries.
Dear Miss Grey—Will you please answer the following questions:
1. Is it correct to answer a wedding invitation (acceptance or regrets)?
2. Should a bridemaid buy her own gloves and pay for her carriage?
3. Also, are you supposed to send a present if you are asked to a shower, whether you go or not?
4. If not, is an apology necessary?
By answering above you will much oblige VIKKY MICH PIZZLEDD.

Ans.—1. In either case a prompt reply is expected.
2. The bridemaid provides her own gloves, but the bride's father attends to the expense of conveyance.
3. It is customary, but optional, of course.
4. A shower is usually informal and your regrets may be expressed to the person giving the shower.

Requests.
I am coming again. This time for help. I saw in the paper where so many were asking for the butterfly pattern I would like to get it too, if it is in the Mail-Box. I would also like to get a bird pattern, if any of the readers have one. I will try and be of some help next time. Find enclosed addressed envelope and stamp if patterners desire.

Dear Miss Grey—I intended to write to you a wonderful page before for your famous stocking-foot pattern. Could I have a Little Me's address, also Carnation's? Inclosed find addressed envelope.

Ans.—Have mailed you pattern and Little Me's address. Carnation has not sent hers in.

This is my first letter to the Mail-Box, but I read your corner every day, and find many valuable hints. I saw where someone was telling a way to make soap bubbles fast, but I lost the paper. Please reprint.

I would like the stocking-foot pattern, enclosed find stamped, addressed envelope and dime. I must go now. BIG JIM CROW.

Ans.—Thank you, Jim Crow, for the hospital fund. I do not recall the method of making enduring bubbles, but would be interested to have the knowledge. You want them as the song says "To fly so high they almost reach the sky," don't you?

I notice different writers of your Page are offering to exchange comic readings. I will exchange with them. My address is with Miss Grey, and I will exchange through her or those who wish to exchange with me may get my Rosa M. Pattern and one contest mailed to you. I think it was fantastic, but asked for contests, and if she will please send a stamped, addressed envelope to the Mail-Box these will be forwarded to her.

Dear Cynthia Grey—I still devour all the good things in the Mail-Box, though of late there seems to have been a dearth of letters. For shame. And it's cherry pie time, too! One would think that the M-L had ceased its functions as a community recipe book. Where have all our good cooks gone?

I notice where Lonesome Alone wishes to correspond with any of the young folks. Inclosed find stamped and addressed envelope for address. With best regards to the Mail-Box.

MOURNING PINE.
Ans.—You mustn't judge the Mail-Box cooks too harshly. Did you not see where Lonesome Alone was requesting us to "Have a Heart" and publish less of those luscious recipes?

I saw June Ross' request for cure for rheumatism and thought I would try and help her. I know lots of folks at the cure. But what do I care? Put a potato in your pocket and carry it there for three months. The later should then be as hard as stone, or for that matter harder, for you cannot break it. The cure costs nothing, and any good if the pocket is hanging on the wall; it should be in the clothes you have on.

Now, folks, have a good laugh. They say the backs of the Germans heads are flat and they have no brains. But my head isn't flat. I won't say much there is in it, though.

I am also sending words of song for Long.

Now for a question. I am thinking of going to business college, and would like a list of clothes that would be necessary. KAISER WILHELM NO. 4.

Ans.—How can you suggest such an expensive cure in these times of shortages as luxuries. K. W. No. 4? I presume you mean to attend business college in the autumn, and would suggest a durable dark suit with a couple of dark silk shirts to match, as well as a couple of lighter colored shirts, a dress for cooler weather, and a fall or winter long coat, and at least one evening dress.

For the Hospital Fund.
Dear Miss Grey—Including you will find 50 cents, a small contribution from mother and myself for the Children's Hospital fund. Kindly acknowledge receipt in The Advertiser, and oblige,

Ans.—Thank you very much for such a generous contribution. We particularly appreciate you using the Mail-Box as your means of helping.
