His lordship said that when guilt for violent death is involved it is either manslaughter or murder. This he followed with a more lelaborate explanation, and the jury orate explanation, and the jury retired again. Twenty minutes later they returned with a verdict of "Gullty of manslaughter, with a strong recommendation to mercy."

The prosecutor then outlined the incident where Charles Helmer, 15-year-old brother of the accused, stuffed Learn's chimney with straw on the afternoon prior to the fatality. He also referred to the trouble on July 12, when both Learn and Lorne Helmer sought is entirely free from blame, m. If he was reckless whether

Mr. Slaght also outlined the evidence wherein accused remarked to his brother that someone was going out the lane on the morning that he buried Learn. "This was a suggestion that it was Learn, before his trip back to bury the body," said the prosecutor. "It was therefore before he knew Learn was dead, and it coincides with the lies told to Alexander, the witness. He had no reason to invent the story, if he did not know Learn was dead. Does that strike you as a circumstance that would make for the innocence or guilt of accused?"
