(Continued.) "Oh, you!" cried the girl, with scarlet face and flashing eyes, in which the tears began to show, making her dark out of the room so that they should not be seen. "Checkmate, Miss Dupont!" said Sydney, with a chuckle. "What a sharp one she is, though. My word! I never liked old Trin before. He's off on some game of his own. Artful old beast! He isn't such a saint as he pretends. He isn't like you in his line. Spees in London's more this way. A beast, though, to talk like that. Knows too much about such matters. I wish I could find out something and get him under my thumb, as I have seen Jenny. How the beggar made me jump!"

PRINCESS COSTUME WITH LACE DRAPERIES. A very attractive dinner gown worn by one of New York's elite at a fashionable uptown restaurant a few nights since showed to advantage the fashionable combination of two materials in one frock; in this instance soft chiffon satin with mousseline de soie. The costume was a princess, the bodice made entirely of the satin and edged at the neckline and separated at this point by panels of the tucked mousseline which extended to the top of the foot hounce. Both the satin and the mousseline were white while the ribbon appliques at the top of the hounce were of a delicate shade of pink mixed with threads of silver, and a very narrow silver sequin edging bordered the draperings of lace on the left and the back, the latter, cut in the front panel. The bodice, cut in a point in the back and rounding in the front, was draped with point lace, which fell over the top of the arm and was caught up on the left arm being covered with a tiny puff of the lace. The foundation of this costume was a white tulle affair draped with a delicate pink chiffon. A dog collar of pearls with diamond clasps and a pair of diamond chain bracelet were the only ornaments.

COLLINS TAKES STAND AND DENIES THE MURDER

Although He Was Forced to Undergo a Gruelling Cross-examination His Nerve Did Not Desert Him.

Hopewell Cape, July 2.—The evidence was completed in the Collins case today and Hon. Mr. McKeown addressed the jury for about two hours in behalf of the prisoner. Solicitor General Jones began his address just before the close and will finish at tomorrow morning session. The prisoner, Edward Collins, stood in his own defence and denied killing Mary Ann McAuley. The court house was crowded all through the day, every available seat was taken and crowds standing. Four witnesses for the crown were heard and the evidence for the crown was all in. Mrs. Ellen Moore, wife of David A. Moore, of Elgin, was the first witness coming to her house on the arrival of the train at Elgin on the 20th of August where he remained as her husband's guests until the following day. Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, of the same place, told of the prisoner coming to her house with Father McAuley and seemed to be suffering from heat or over exertion and shortness of breath. She directed him to the pump where he could get some cold water. He went out but passed around the house in the wrong direction and she did not see him again. Charles Gogang, of Hopewell Hill, told of passing Father McAuley's house about 8 o'clock p. m. on the August, and when about one mile and half west, he met Father McAuley and James Doyle, Father McAuley going home and James Doyle going to the house of a friend. Father McAuley's place he saw him walking up and down the road, his Newfoundland dog beside him. Father McAuley was watching down the road towards Duffrey's. Ernest W. Lynds, sheriff of Albert county, gave evidence of the arrest under the warrant at St. John and the prisoner being taken to Peteticado the station agent came in the train and recognized the prisoner as stated. At the close of testimony the solicitor general announced that the crown's evidence was all in and that the prisoner, immediately opened for the defence, briefly criticising the crown's case as complete and without any substantial evidence. He then outlined the evidence the defence would offer and then came the sensation of the whole trial when Mr. Sherrin used these words: "We will put the prisoner on the stand and you gentlemen of the jury and the honorable court will hear his statement and he will fully explain to you satisfactorily, I trust, many of the points which may appear strange." The guard opened the dock gate and the prisoner stepped quickly out and over to the witness stand, the centre of every gaze. He told in a plain way his whole life: "As a boy in Liverpool, he being one of a family of six children, three boys and three girls. His father dying in 1861, and a sister just a few weeks ago. He went to school some in his early boyhood and at the age thirteen began going to work in this way on the S.S. Dominion, early in June, 1880, reached the city of Montreal. He remained there about three weeks, then came along by various stages on the I. C. R. R., he reached Amherst on the 4th of August, 1886, which was his 20th birthday, and just one week later he landed from a steamer at Mary Point, in the parish of Albert. He remained there about six weeks, and then he came to St. John, where he met the late Father McAuley the same day and arranged to go with him to his home in New Ireland on the following Monday, when Father McAuley would return from his studies at Hillboro. That on Monday, the 30th of August, he with Father McAuley went to his home and commenced work in his service. He told of each day's work during the week he was in New Ireland, how that on the following Friday the priest went away to Fredericton Road leaving him to do the work under the direction of the housekeeper and after the priest had gone, he would not stay there and on Sunday he made some preparations to go away quietly packing valises at odd times while he took away and placing them under his bed in his room. After Mary Ann had gone to bed he put on his pants and took a look around the room downstairs, picking up the things found in the valises. Monday morning he got up at 6 o'clock, took another look around and put some more articles in the valises, then made the fire and went out and fed the horse.

The city clerk informed the council that the I. C. R. authorities were about to construct a siding in their yard here and extend the same across George and Charlotte streets. He thought the city should protest against any more level crossings as they were considered a source of great danger. O. S. Crockett, M. P., was permitted to address the council on the subject. He said that upon learning that another siding was to be laid across George and Charlotte streets he at once wrote to Deputy Minister Butler protesting against the proceeding. He suggested that the city council and board of trade should endeavor to induce the I. C. R. and the P. E. C. to construct a union station in this city as the stations now used by these railways were wholly unworthy of the capital of the province. After some further discussion the city clerk was instructed to communicate with the railway department in regard to proposed new sidings. Ald. Hooper complained to the council of the large number of yelping dogs which disturb the slumber of up-town residents and gave notice that he intended to move at a future meeting for the appointment of a dog catcher. It is expected that the new assessment roll prepared under the act of last session will be out about the middle of July. Principal Assessor Johnston declining to make public the rate per hundred, has said that it will be lower than that of any town in Canada of the same population.
