In the train going over a man stood in the aisle of the dining car and told with patriotic fevor about the biggest steel cable in the world being made in Hamilton! It is as thick as your two wrists! Not so very thick as some substances go, but for a steel cable — well, as the small boy would say, "that's some cable." It was exhibited at the Armories, where there as a magnificent display of things made in Hamilton, and not only visitors, but ardent citizens as well, never would have dreamed that this city that was supposed to be aleeping under the mountain could display as extensive and so varied a sollection of manufactured goods.

It was like a huge midway at a fair, with a plentiful and heterogenous assemblage of side shows, and one had not paid full homage to Hamilton's greatness until one had seen the biggest man on earth, drunk a King George sods and eaten an Old Boys smade. The fully equipped e'e-brants were gay contumes of various descriptions, as at a carnival, and carried ticklers, bunches of confetti, tin horns, megaphones, noby twinlers, cow bells, and ministure frying pans with gongs attached. The din of the amassing noises produced by these grotseque means was, to say the least history. Even the side shows searcely could be heard. All these sounds were commingled with the blaring of merry-go-rounds, and the imprompts minging of "Auld Lang Syne" by scratch male choruses in front of a-bar or in the middle of the market place.

The famous Hamilton market place was a dip-the-dips, the dra, that was not proof against neasiskness. Still hard by screeched a great merry-go-round of the natural motion variety. These attractions were somewhat director, the crystal mane and the "only performing duck in against to them is the middle of the market place.

RARE ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

Soldier, diplomatist, athlete, fine shot, and excellent horsoman, he has been rightly termed the "Admirable Crichton of the Ecyal Family." His love for sthistics was developed at Eton, and he holds very strong views concerning the spectaming side of sport. "Unfortunately." he once said, "it is the tendessey of the age for men and boys to wisch other people play instead of playing themselves. When I was at Eton I was teld that miess I played football five times a week I should parobably find standing easier than sitting."

There was one Etos spisode, however, which made the Prince blush furiously at the time. This was when Queen Victoria, during the time of her Diamond Jubilec, went to the school, called for "Arthur," and embraced him, to his obvious reluctance and confusion, before his class colleagues.

The boylsh ambition. however, of "Martun," as the Frince is known to his intimates, was to be a watch and clock makes. But this ambition was quickly given up when his father made Etm go round with the man who wound up the clocks at Bagshot Park. For the Prince came to the conclusion that the occupation heaked excitament, and turned his attention to coldiering.

From Eton he went to Sandhurst, and entered upon his military duties in his usual characteristic, therough manner. "It is a pitty," Lord Richemser once remarked, "that his Ecyal Highness was born a Prince, for that fast has probably prevented him taking the prominent position in the army to which his abilities entitle him." For the Prince has served with the (Queen's Own) Hussanz, the Boyal Horse Artillery, and the Seots Green, and to make himself a theroughly efficient officer he has undergone instruction, courses at the signaling and masketry schools.

Once at Aldershort a curious lady visitor asked a private which was the Prince. She was conducted to the regimental coffee bar, and saw a young officer, pipe in mouth, gravely reckoning them up in an account-book, "Don't look much like a prince, does he?" tersely remarked the private.

The formation of the island was originally quite unsuitable for a declyard, as the solfd rock rose sheer from the water to a height of 60 f et to 70 feet. By using convict labor, however, the rock was gradually cut back, first to permit the building of graving decks, and later to make room for building slips and shop near water level. The custom of restoring to an oath in extreme cases, sanctified as it is by all religious antiquity, it apt to introduce into the laxer sort of minds the motion of two kinds of truth; the one aplicable to the solemn affairs of justice and the other to the common proceedings of daily intercourse. As truth bound upon the conscience by an oath can be but truth, so in the common affirmations of the shop and the market place a latitude is expected and conceded upon questions wanting this solemn covenant.
