CHATHAM, SEPTEMBER 14, 1882.

most thought. The church should be pure. It cannot be perfectly pure, but it should be searched, sifted, cleaned, guarded.

Corruptions are the great sin of this age and of all ages. It has been divinely declared to be idolatry. It is the worship of mammon. It is the sin by which all these thieves, commonly called defrauders fall. Led away by the "curved lust of gold," they do this great wickedness and sin against God.

Yet the church cannot discipline a man for covetousness. He may show the vice of his penuriousness or his greed, but it is a state of heart, and cannot be made a matter of discipline until it breaks out into an open offence. Then it is loathe to avert the shame that comes upon the church.

But when we bear in mind how few thieves there are in the church compared with those out of it, and the inducements there are for bad men to get into it, and the impossibility of detecting them until the outbreak comes, there is reason for the church to rejoice in its comparative purity. And let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.--N. Y. Observer.

A Hint.
If you wish to save yourself, your family, your friends a world of suffering and pain, which at present they endure needlessly, and also save many dollars in doctor's bills go at once to the nearest store, and buy a few bottles of Perry Davis' Pain-Killer.

Facts Worth Remembering.
Sudden deaths do not come from heart disease, one case in twenty, but from congestion of the lungs or brain, and from apoplexy. More die from congestion of the lungs than the brain, and more of congestion of the brain than from apoplexy.

Such a death from heart disease is usually caused by rupture of some large artery near the heart; from congestion of the lungs, by instantly stopping the breath; from congestion of the brain, by causing pressure on the brain which paralyzes and instantly destroys life; from apoplexy, by hemorrhage in the brain.

Heart disease most frequently results from neglected or improperly treated rheumatism. It more often follows mild rheumatism than the severe kind, because severe kind receives prompt attention, while the mild form is often neglected and left to work its way to the heart.

Persons who suppose themselves suffering from heart disease because they have pain in the region of the heart, or palpitation, seldom have any disease of that organ. In nine cases out of ten, they are suffering from dyspepsia, nothing more. Congestion of the lungs is most frequently caused by a sudden change from the heat of an ill-ventilated room, or rail road car, to fresh air, to the cold air outside, which is here protected by sufficient clothing; hence, many persons thus seized drop dead in the streets.

Congestion of the brain most frequently results from trouble and anxiety of mind, producing sleeplessness, followed by the engorgement of the small blood vessels of the brain, sudden loss of vital power, and almost instant death. Apoplexy may be inherited disease, or it may be induced by too free living, or its opposite, too great abstinence. Paralysis may affect only a small portion of the body, from a finger to an entire limb, or it may disable half the body, or the whole body when death soon follows. When half the body is affected by paralysis, we may be certain that the seat of the disease is in the opposite side of the brain, because nerve fibres cross. Partial paralysis is often temporary, when caused by the rupture of a small blood vessel, if the clot is got rid of by absorption or otherwise.

Although this is a disease that all classes of the people are liable to, its most destructive work is done among the deprived and dissipated. There is no doubt that the habitual use of tobacco is one of the most prominent causes of paralysis and other nerve diseases.

A severe cold can be soonest cured by remaining in bed, in a warm room, and near the fire, until all signs of it have disappeared. Then care should be taken to prevent a relapse by having the feet warmly clad, and the whole body, particularly the chest and the back of the neck, well protected when going out.

A recent cough almost always leads to the following treatment within two or three days: Mix in a bottle four ounces of glycerine, two ounces of alcohol, two ounces of water, two grains of morphia. Shake well. Does for an adult, one to two teaspoonfuls every two or three hours. Halt this quantity to children from ten to fifteen years. It is not safe to give it to infants or children under ten years of age.

To stop bleeding; if from a cavity in the jaw after a tooth has been extracted, shape a cork into the proper form and size to cover the bleeding cavity, and keep enough to be kept firmly in place when the mouth is closed. This, we believe is our own invention, and we have never known it to fail. It has served us in desperate cases.

When an artery is cut, the red blood spurts out at each pulsation. Press the thumb firmly over the artery near the wound and on the side toward the heart. Press hard enough to stop the bleeding, and wait till a physician comes. The wounded person is often able to do this himself, if he has the requisite knowledge.

Simple fractures may be adjusted by oneself. Get the limb as nearly as possible in the natural position, and then send for the doctor. There is no great urgency in such cases.

In fracture of the skull, with compression and loss of consciousness, examine the wound, and if possible, raise the broken edge of the skull so as to relieve the pressure on the brain. Prompt action will often save life.

In case of poisoning, the simple rule is to get the poison out of the stomach as soon as possible. Mustard and salt are promptly as emetic, and they are always at hand. Stir a tablespoon in a glass of water. Stir the person swallow it quickly. If it does not cause vomiting in five minutes, repeat the dose. In vomiting, give the whites of two or three eggs, and send for the doctor.

Burns and scalds are soonest relieved by an application of cold water. Dry calomel of soda, or baking soda, sprinkled over the burned spot, is the latest remedy, and is said to be very effective. In severe cases, a physician should be sent for.--Hall's Journal of Health.

When King James the first, wrote his counterblast to tobacco, the royal pedant knew nothing of the "Myrtle Navy." If he had instead of wasting his brains on his curious production, he would have filled his royal pipe with it, and would have taken a royal smoke, he would then have been prepared to admit that with regard to the injurious effects of tobacco, it had depended on what tobacco you smoked.
