It is claimed by interested parties, says the Roston Post, that the owners of the steamer Tongariro, which landed about 29 passengers at Halifax instead of Portland, on account of various damages sustained on the trip from Liverpoot, stand in a fair way of losing money on them since they were taken in charge. An agreement was made by the owners to land the passengers at New York at a certain sum per head. The passengers were landed at Lewis wharf by Plant steamer Halifax, the owners of which received $5 each, and they were forwarded to destination at $1 each.
