Ottawa, Oct. 9.—This has been a day of uncertainties and sudden last-hour changes in regard to Mr. Borden's cabinet. The rival aspirants and factions have been busy all day advising and counter-advising the prime minister and his "man at the wheel," as to the selection of his assistants.

Mr. Borden, it is understood, decided tonight the final draft of his cabinet slate, but no official announcement will be made until he has submitted the list to his excellency for approval tomorrow morning.

The evening in of the new ministers will take place about noon, this being the last official act of his excellency before he leaves for Montreal.

ANCIENT PASTRY MOULDS

They Stamp Elaborate Pictures on Cakes and Buns.

If the gingerbread Elizabethan times are going out of fashion in the seventeenth century the biscuit and the bun were appearing in a quaint and ornate state of infancy, says the Queen. Kingly effigies and royal features were stamped on the cakes and buns, and the royal household was always flatteringly impressed upon the small pieces of paste and caraway that lay in the shadows of the fashionable bun houses. Take were told upon the delectable and a sugary cake by means of a firm impression from the pearwood or boxwood, or romance was carried to the lips in the surface of a cracker, and the story of the story of the famous Biddenden cakes and embossing of delicate cakes and "jumbles" during the late Stuart reign were stamped on the surface of the pastry cook's profession, while in private life, at a period when cookery was considered a lady's most graceful accomplishment, the country chateaux must have despatched many an order to hergent in town for a pearwood mould, preferably one depicting the equestrian career of the reigning monarch on pie and the loyal hostess could do herself and her neighbors justice.

In Newbery's Dives Pragmatic, 1663, a printed catalogue of the most famous Elizabethan kitchen, we get a long metrical enumeration of the incised rollers for the state and various moulds and ornaments, another old book of favour, dainties, buns, and cakes, and the moulds as articles. Put your cake between wooden boards and saw the ends together till the sides are cold. Current breads, very popular throughout the seventeenth century, were stamped with the names of the monarchs, and the moulds were considered a lady's most graceful accomplishment, the country chateaux must have despatched many an order to hergent in town for a pearwood mould, preferably one depicting the equestrian career of the reigning monarch on pie and the loyal hostess could do herself and her neighbors justice.

TURKEY MAKES GRAIN CONTRABAND OF WAR

Many Vessels Loading Will Fear to Sail—Sultan Orders Expulsion of Italians and Massacre is Feared—Powers Anxious to Limit Zone of Hostilities to Tripoli.

Canadian Press.

London, Oct. 9.—Telegrams posted at the Baltic Mercantile and Shipping Exchange today stated that Turkey has declared grain a contraband of war, and that the banks are refusing to finance shipments. The loading of vessels has been stopped. Italy would limit war to Tripoli.

Rome, Oct. 9.—It is understood that the powers will make representations at Constantinople notifying Turkey that Italy, with a view to avoiding very grave complications, the consequences of which would be detrimental chiefly to Turkey, has agreed to limit the war to Tripoli. Moreover that this principle will be abandoned if the Ottoman government is unable to restrain excess against Italy on Turkish territory and thus force Italy to carry the war into other provinces of the Turkish empire for the direct protection of her subjects and their interests, which Germany could not safeguard without using force.

DR. CARMAN DISSENTS

Living Wage for the Laborer as Well as Clergymen Would Lead to the Moral and Religious Uplift of the People, is the Opinion of Many Delegates

Canadian Press.

Toronto, Oct. 9.—A paper read before the Ecumenical Methodist conference today by Prof. A. S. Peck, of Hartford, Conn., on "Permanent Results of Biblical Criticism" precipitated a debate on so-called "higher criticism," which was participated in by many leaders of Methodism from various parts of the world.

The propriety, necessity even, of criticism was generally conceded, and the trend of the opinions expressed was in favor of a more liberal and open relative to various phases of criticism, past, present and to come, was that it "leads inevitably to Christ, the divine son of God, Saviour of the world."

Special to The Telegram.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—A federal election could hardly bring out more square contradiction than was crowded into a short hearing of the Russell case today, when evidence in rebuttal was heard, most of which was devoted to denial of statements made by witnesses for the defence.

Mr. Cochenthaler flatly contradicted the evidence of Mr. McNamara. The latter had said he had not seen Dr. Roddick on Oct. 12. But Cochenthaler said that on that day he had gone with McNamara to see Dr. Roddick to ask advice in regard to the dispute between the two witnesses. Cochenthaler's evidence, while other objections involved so much law and memory that Judge Archer declined to give an immediate decision, and the examination of Mr. Cochenthaler will be concluded tomorrow, when Judge Archer gives his decision.
