Hy visit was not well timed either to see these semi-civilized aborigines in the most favorable mood, or to procure, which was to me most desirable, a good and reliable guide. An Indian weeding was on the tapis, and the evening previous had been devoted to a general glorification by the villagers of both sexes, consequently I found a majority of the myles debauch. My friend led me through house after house, inquiring first for this man and then another. Little attention was paid to his questions by those addressed, but an occasional nod of the head or point of the finger would put us on the scent and a search would reveal our man, but too sleepy or drunk to talk business. One house, probably the largest in the village, but unlike most others in consisting of but one square room, contained a bedstead and bed, a shake-down on the floor, cookstoned the most favorable mood, or to proceed and reliable guide.
