Under-Currents

By The Duchess

"I shan't want any one's help," declares she, shaking her head and feeling very valiant. I know a great many people abroad in Italy and Spain, and I dare say I shall be able to get to them somehow. At all events, with a little fresh burst of petulant grief, "I am sure of this, that I shall not stay here to be insulted!" She draws her breath hard.

"Insulted!" repeats Peyton, "You cannot mean that. He would not dare to go so far as that?"

"What would he not dare? More at least than I could repeat," says she tremulously, turning away her head. "Not even to me!" entreats he softly. He has repossessed himself of her hand, and is now caressing it fondly and with agitation.

"I couldn't," brokenly, her face still averted.

"Try, darling—do try. I know you will feel ever so much better if you can only bring yourself to let me share your trouble with you."

"Oh, I'd be ashamed," says Griselda miserably. A sob breaks from her. "Well, if you must hear it, he said—that—that—I was vulgar and indecent, and that I was only too willing to throw myself into the arms of the first man I met. Now—now are you satisfied? You made me tell you!"

"Cries she, and then gives way altogether, and burst into a storm of weeping.

"What a scandal!" exclaims the young man between his teeth. "Griselda, darling, don't go on like that. Is it not worth even one of your tears?" He has seated himself beside her on the parapet by this time, forgetful of any searching eyes, and, having stolen one arm around her, is vehemently kissing the little trembling hand he holds. There, look up. You said something about running away just now—well, why not?"

"He has set a spy upon my actions," goes on Griselda, who has not been listening to him very attentively. You know that old housekeeper I have told you of, she watches where I go, and follows me, whilst pretending not to, all the time. And you can't think," sobbing afresh, "how hateful it is to know that some one is taking note of every step you move. I feel just like a prisoner—like that man in one of Allan Poe's stories who always had an eye on him."

"And it is all my fault," says Peyton miserably. "I wonder you don't hate me."

"So do I," agrees Griselda with a heavy sigh.

"It is I who have brought it all down on you!"

"It is" with a still heavier sigh and a long and thoughtful study of his features. Then, as an adorable outcome of her meditative mood, "and yet," says she, "I don't hate you."

"She seems rather surprised at this herself, and grows pensive as she wells upon it. Mr. Peyton grows rapturous as he dwells on her.

A shrill and terrible voice in the female key, coming to them across the garden destroys, however, all analytical and sentimental thought in a breath.

"Miss Griselda! Miss Griselda!"

"There she is, I must run!" murmurs Griselda, a hurried tone, scrambling to her feet. "Oh, go—go, good-bye."

"Not good-bye!" implores he, holding her fast. He has dropped off the top of the parapet, and is once more presenting himself in the light of a limpet hanging on like grim death to the wall. "Give me another chance of seeing you. Name a day—an hour."

"Miss Griselda—"

Again that harsh voice destroys the exquisite harmony of the dying evening.

"Go!" entreats Griselda, now in a faint terrified tone.

An attack is liable to come one at this hour. Speak, darling! implores he giving her a little jog as if to compel her consent.

"I can't. I'm not sure. Oh there she is behind the yew hedge coming this way! She'll see you! Well, yes, then. She is here now—close! Oh, go! Yes, yes, yes! at this hour if possible."

She seizes her hand, casts a last careful glance at him, waits to hear the gentle thud that tells of his safe arrival on the ground below and then, picking up her petticoats she commences a gay little French chase, and, avoiding Mrs. Grunch by a careful detour to the left disappears amongst the friendly shrubberies.

CHAPTER XXIII.

I have not that alacrity of spirit. Nor cheer of mind that I was wont to have.

"Such a narrow escape as I've had!" cries she, running into Vera's room. "I flatter myself that for once in my life I have done that old woman."

"Who?"

"The admirable Grunch. That silly Mr. Peyton would come to the very wall to see what had become of me, and Grunch was with an ace of seeing him. However she didn't."

"I don't think she is as clever as you think."

"I think she was clever enough to set my uneasiness on my track the other day. No, Vera I can't go into a thing as you do and argue it out to the bitter end. I have only instincts to guide me, and they warn me against the amiable Grunch. She has many a stone in her sleeve for me, and one of them she threw the day before yesterday."

"You forget that I have instincts too," says Vera with a languid smile. "I was warned against our cousin; I can hardly, therefore, blame you for unreasonable fancies. But how foolish

Darken Gray Hair, Look Young, Pretty

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens So Naturally that Nobody can tell.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but why delight the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a light toilet requisite to impart color and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A Child Gets Cross, Sick and Feverish When Constipated

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated Clean Little Liver and Bowels

If your little one's tongue is coated it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "Fruit Laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children, of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeit sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

HEART FLUTTERING EASILY CORRECTED

Good Advice to Folks Bothered With Palpitation, Weakness, Etc.

If your heart flutters, be careful. An attack is liable to come one at any time. Excitement, over-exertion or emotion may cause it.

If blood rushes to the head, if palpitation and short breath are noticeable, there's cause for alarm.

If you want a good honest remedy try Ferrozene. We recommend Ferrozene because we know it's just right for heart trouble. It cured A.P. Beattie who lives at Allen Hotel, Bay City, Mich. See if your symptoms resemble these:

Some Symptoms of Weak Heart: Nervousness, Palpitation, Trembling, Dizziness, Sinking Feeling, Heart Pain, Short Breath, Weakness.

Mr. Beattie says: "I was weak and miserable. I was subject to heart palpitation and dizziness."

"As I grew worse I began to have trembling and sinking sensations. Ferrozene strength and my heart gave vigor to my nerves, soon made me well. It's a great builder."

By strengthening the muscles of the heart, giving proper circulation and causing a general rebuilding of the whole system, Ferrozene is bound to do grand work in heart trouble. Try it 50c per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarzburgh Co., Kingston, Ont.
